

fired at Di p, had all the effect that could be expected. The fire continued the 13th with great violence; The Night following, two Magazines blew up, in one of which there could not be less than 4 or 500 Barrels of Powder, as we judg'd by the report. We believe likewise, that several Ships were burnt and blown up, we hearing some Guns go off first, and presently after several blows; one of these Ships was probably a Privateer, which we chased in on the 12th. On the 14th we failed from Diep, at which time the whole Town lay in Ashes, there being hardly a House left standing. The 15th in the Afternoon, we came before Havre de Grace: My Lord Berkeley sent in several Boats to sound all about the Harbor, and the Earl of Macclesfield, who commands the Land Forces, ordered one of the Engineers to go with them, to observe the place. Soon after the Fleet Anchored as near the Town as conveniently they could; and the Bomb Vessels being placed in their Stations, with several small Frigats, and a great many Boats Manned with Soldiers and Seamen, near them, for their security, against any attempt of the Enemy in the Night, we began to play our Bombs yesterday about Four in the Afternoon; And by Eight at Night, they had set Havre de Grace on fire in several places. The Enemy all this while, fired a great many Shot and Bombs from the shore, most of which went over us; One Shell unfortunately falling in the Granada Bomb-Ketch, blew it up, but the men were all saved except thirteen: Captain Wilshire, the Commander, was very much hurt, and Captain Silver had his Leg broke. Besides this Accident, we had but one man killed, which was by a Cannon Shot, and two or three wounded. The Earl of Macclesfield, and my Lord Berkeley, went in their Pinnaces to visit the Bomb-Vessels, and to encourage the men, and were on Board one of them called the Firedrake, when the Granada blew up near her. This morning it blowing very fresh we ceased firing, but intend to begin again so soon as the Weather is better. We reckon that half of the Town is already destroyed, with several of the Ships in the Harbor, at the entrance whereof, the Enemy sunk two, to hinder our going in; And some Ships sunk themselves to prevent being burnt.

Falmouth, July 16. Yesterday was brought into this Port, by Their Majesties Ship the Dartmouth, a Privateer of St. Malo, carrying 6 Guns, 4 Patereroes, and 70 men, which she took on the 13th in Mounts-Bay.

Whitehall, July 21. This Afternoon came in Letters from Admiral Russell, (by the way of the Groynes) dated on Board the Brisannia the first of this month, Old Scile, off Tangier; He did not touch at Cadix, but sent Orders to Rear-Admiral Neville, who was in that Bay with a Squadron of English and Dutch Men of War, to join him to the Westward of Cape Spartell, which they did on the 30th of June. And when these Letters were written, Admiral Russell was proceeding with all the expedition he could towards Barcelona, being informed that the French Fleet lay between that place and Alfagues. He had ordered the Turkey Ships, both English and Dutch, with the Men of War appointed for their Convoy, to make the best of their way to Cartagena, and to expect there farther Orders, which he would send them from Allicant, according to the Intelligence he should receive of the Enemy.

The Letters from Holland of Tuesday last are not yet come in.
