Waradin. Orders were some since that the Grand Vitier came the day beone to Salahkament, and 'twas given out, that he core ide of the Danube, to join the Army; and the like of the Danube, to join the Army; and the like of the Danube, to join the Army; and the like of the Danube, to join the Army; and the like of the Danube, to join the Lipsellous, with the lipsellous were sent to General Peiland, who had with him 4kegimens mere; An Express was also disparched to General Viterani, who was polled with the Imperial Troops in the Contest of the Retner of the Contest of the Retner of the Retne

Turks were decamped from Salankament, and were march: Turks were decamped from Salankament, and were marching towards Peter-Waradin; and about Noon some of their Troops appeared in fight of ours. The Visice pitched his Tenrs on the Hills near Carloviz, about 3 Leagues from our Camp. That Evening our Bridge was resitted, and the relt of the Imperial Horse, which had lain on the other side of the River, joined our Army. The 3th the Enemy moved nearer to Peter-Waradin; and on the 9th in the morning they Encamped about a League and a half from our Intrenchments; and their Fieet, consisting of about 110 Vessels, Anchored almost within Cannon Shot of Peter-Waradin. The Imperial Troops had that day several Skie our Intrenchments, and their Fiett, conniting of about 110 Vessels, Anchored almost within Cannon Shot of Peter-Waradin. The Imperial Troops had that day several Skirmisses with the Enemy. The 10th the Turks began to cist up an Intreachment, and some of their Troops appeared near our Camp, but were quickly obligen to retire. The 11th there passed nothing of moment. The 12th was spent in Cannonading, as well between the Armies as the two Fleets; On our side littledamage was done besides the firing of two Ammunition Wagons, by which about 30 men were killed. The 13th the Camon continued to play on both sides; The Enemies design seemed to be to destroy our Bridge over the Danubs, and to post seemed which General Caprara had posted the Radziens and Hungarians at all places where the Enemy c u'd Land. The Auxiliary Troops of Brandenburg, and the 4 Regiments commanded by General Polland, were expected in our Camp in a day or two. The Courier that brought these Letters, and who parted from thence the 14th, says the Cannonading still continued on both sides when he came away. They write from Transsevanta, that General Veterani was marched from Dobra towards Veradia.

From the Confederate Army commanded by Prince Lewis

From the Confederate Army commanded by Prince Lewis of Baden near Hagenbach, Sept. 18. We lay encamped for feveral days at Kretzingen near Durlach, and twas generally believed that the Campagne was going to end en this lide. In the mean time Prince Lewis had fent for a great many Boats, who were brought to the Camp upon Wagons. On the 12th Instant the Saxon Treops marched from hence towards Hailbron, to cover, as twas given one the Magazine they have there, while the reft of the out, the Magazine they have there, while the reft of the Army approached nearer to the Rhine; The night following the Boats were put into the Water, and a Detachement of 2000 Grenadiers posted themselves in a little Island in the mid way. The 13th the Margrave of Durlisch went over the Rhine near Hagenbach, with 4000 Island Foot Staff Leth (the Bridge heine fields) Island in the mid way. The 13th the Margrave of Durlsch went over the Rhine near Hagenbach, with 4000 Horse and Foot, and the 15th (the Bridge being finished) the rest of the Army followed, and marched to Dachsland. We lest our Baggage in the before mentioned Island, where some Works were east up for their greater security, and advanced yesterday to Hagenbach, which place the Enemy had abandoned, as well as several other Posts which they had fortisted along the Rhine. Our unexpected prising of this River has greatly surprized the Enemy, whose Army has thereupon quitted the Honsdruck, and marches towards Landau, to cover that place: They have also fent a Reinforcement to Philipsburgh. On our side we are putting the Country under Contribution; and it's believed we shall advance towards Landau.

Hailbron, Sept. 21. Prince Lewis of Baden passed the Rhine she 14th between Philipsburg and Fort-Louis: He has put a Gavisin of 200 Men into Hagenbach, and another into Lautenberg, which last place was taken by assault, and of 200 Men that defended it, most were put to the Sword; since which all the Country round has been put under Contribution. The Forces of Saxony, whose coming this way is thought to have been only a Stratagem to amuse the Enemy, are marched back towards the Rhine, to join the Consecurate Army, which is encamped near Hagenbach. The Mareschal de Lorge has posten himself between Philipsburg and Landau.

Mentz, Sept. 25. The Troops of Hesse, Murster, Paderborne, and Wostemburtell passed the Rhine here yesterday, and encamped near Laubenbeim, from whence they marched this day to Odenbeim, and to morrow they are to march again. The Brieges that were laid over the
