

Temp. Capt. Philip Fletcher Fullard, M.C.,
Gen. List and R.F.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He has on many occasions displayed the utmost dash and fearlessness in attacking enemy aircraft at close range and in destroying at least eight hostile machines during a period of about ten days. His determination and fine offensive spirit have in almost every instance resulted in disaster to the enemy.

(M.C. gazetted in this Gazette.)

2nd Lt. Joseph Bertram Greene, M.C.,
R.F.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as F.O.O. during an attack. At great personal risk he took a wire through a heavy enemy barrage and kept up communication with the batteries. For a long time this was the only line by which information could be transmitted to Brigade Headquarters by the infantry, and the maintenance of this line enabled essential information to be sent to the rear. It was maintained under very heavy shell fire, and had it not been in existence the effective support of the infantry by the artillery would not have been possible. The coolness and gallantry displayed by this officer were most noticeable, and largely contributed to the success of the operations.

(M.C. gazetted in this Gazette.)

T./Lt. Richard Charles Hall, M.C., R.
Suss. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was exposed to continuous shell and machine-gun fire throughout the day while marking out a track in rear of the advancing infantry. He not only completed his task, but also attended to the wounded of his own and other units, being under fire the whole time. His determination and fearlessness were a very fine example to all.

(M.C. gazetted 20th October, 1916.)

Capt. Lonsdale Hammill, M.C., S. Lanc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He had been detailed for duty in rear of the front line, but hearing from a wounded man that the officers of a company which was attacking under a barrage had suffered heavily, he at once went to the front line under severe fire of every description, and, ably assisted by another officer, re-organised the company, making dispositions for the defence and attending to the wounded. He remained there until daylight, searching "No Man's Land" for wounded and collecting men of a platoon which had become detached, displaying the utmost energy and devotion to duty throughout the operation.

(M.C. gazetted 14th January, 1916.)

T./Capt. Robert Inkerman Harris, M.B.,
M.C., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty under exceptional circumstances. When his Corps main dressing station was shelled on three separate occasions, whilst crowded with patients, he supervised and directed the collection and evacuation of the wounded to a place of safety. This was quickly done owing to his coolness, prompttude and disregard of personal danger, which did away with all confusion, and reduced the casualties to a minimum.

(M.C. gazetted 14th November, 1916.)

2nd Lt. (T./Lt.) John Hayes, M.C., Lanc.
Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack. Owing to many casualties among officers he took charge of two companies, and led them to their objective. Although wounded in the knee, he remained on duty, and it was chiefly due to his exertions that a hold on one trench was retained and a defensive flank formed. On another occasion he took charge of a minor operation with the object of straightening the line, which was successfully carried out. By his bearing and courage he set a fine example to all ranks.

(M.C. gazetted 25th November, 1916.)

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Thomas Harvey Henderson, M.C., Rif. Brig., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Although severely gassed and nearly blinded, he carried on with the utmost gallantry and determination during the attack on a strong enemy position, afterwards personally organising carrying parties for the front line under very heavy shell fire, and keeping the foremost troops well supplied with ammunition, rations and water. His initiative, cheerfulness and absolute disregard of personal danger were most marked throughout an exceptionally strenuous operation.

(M.C. gazetted 30th March, 1916.)

2nd Lt. Percival Robert Henri, M.C., Lond.
R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When all signal communications had broken down, he went forward across very difficult ground in darkness, and under shell fire, visiting a considerable part of the front line and bringing back valuable information. Later, during the attack, when no information was coming through, he went forward under a heavy hostile barrage, and returned with information showing the situation on the Brigade front.

(M.C. gazetted 27th July, 1916.)

2nd Lt. William Arthur Henderson, M.C., R. Scots., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. At a very critical moment, when a hostile counter-attack had caused our front-line troops to fall back, he with two other officers went forward and, acting with great determination and initiative, broke up the enemy attack and saved the situation. He showed a very high standard of personal courage.

(M.C. gazetted 14th July, 1917.)

2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Oliver William Hepburn, M.C., R. Fu.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when handling his Company in an attack. He displayed great coolness and fearlessness in the face of heavy hostile gun and rifle fire, leading his men on after a temporary check, together with a party of several men from other units whom he had rallied and re-organised. The fact that his