

From Turin we are told, that the Duke of Savoy is preparing for a journey to Nizza, to give his Dutchess the satisfaction of shewing her those Countreys, and to encourage the Trade which he endeavors to establish, at Villa Franca. The said Duke has promised the Venerian Ambassadour to recruit and pay for one year longer his Regiments which are now in the service of the Republick in the Kingdom of Candia.

Venice, Octob. 13. Here are lately arrived Letters from our Generalissimo, and other Officers in Candia, bearing date the 3d. past, informing us, that the Turks had made a breach in the Fort St. Andre, about 30 paces broad, which was by the indefatigable industry of the besieged stoped up with such Materials, as they have always in readines for that purpose, and that the Enemy for some time forbore to attempt it by storm, for fear of being drawn upon our Mines: But on the 30th of August the Grand Visier commanded his people to make an Assault upon that Fort, which they readily obeyed, coming on with great Cries and much fierceness, continuing it for the space of one hour; but found themselves opposed with so much Courage by the Defendants, commanded by General Caterin Cornaro, and Monsieur de St. Andre Montbrun, and encouraged by many other Officers and persons of Quality, who served there as Volunteers, that they were forced to retire with extraordinary loss, having in the Assault (as they were informed, by some Turks which fled to them from their League) above 3000 men killed upon the place, and as many wounded; and had they for another hour continued the storm (according to the Account given by Monsieur de St. Andre Montbrun) they might in probability have lost the greatest part of their Army.

They further say, That at the same time in which the Enemy made this attempt upon the Fort St. Andre, the Defendants made a lusty sally upon the Enemy lying before the Sabionera, beating them from their Post, killing many upon the place, and carrying into the Town with them many Sacks of Wooll, with which the Enemy defended themselves from our Shot, with some numbers of Swords, and other Armes which they had left behind them.

About the same time our people in the Fort of St. Andre, being sensible of some damage they received from a Gallery raised by the Turks near that Bulwark, plaid upon it with their Mortar-pieces, which lighted so well among them, that of 200 Turks which were there lodged, very few of them escaped, being either killed or wounded.

The Turks have since on the first and second of September made other Assaults upon the same Fort, but not with so much courage as before, but in both of them they were received with much valour, and beaten off with much slaughter. The Defendants are of late much encouraged by some fresh succors put into the Town, so that on all occasions they shew themselves in arms upon the walls, challenging the Enemy to an assault, and in the mean time are privately working in the Mines, that if the Enemy shall again adventure to storm the Fort, they will in little time find the effects of them.

In these assaults and the sally made at the Sabionera, our loss exceeded not the number of 60 men, and amongst them the noble Marco Barbarigo, Colonel Sala, one Ingeneer of Burgundy, and three Serjeants: amongst the wounded are several persons of Eminency, as Lorenzo Dona, Francisco Batti, Santo Barbaro, and some few others; General Cattarin Cornaro having received a slight bruise with a stone. The Generalissimo is in person taking care of the Sabionera, but in the mean time gives out his necessary Orders for the defence of all other parts of the Town.

After the reading of these Letters, the Senate was pleased upon consideration of the great services performed by the General Cattarin Cornaro, to conferre on him the honour of Knighthood.

This evening arrived here fresh Letters from Candia of the 9th past, telling us that on the 6th, the Turks were again beaten off from the Fort St. Andre, which they had assaulted with great fury; but that the Enemy had made nearer approaches to the Sabionera, from whence the Defendants were labouring with all imaginable industry to remove them.

From Dalmatia we find that the Turks have not any design of making any considerable attempt this year in those parts; but that the Bassa of Bosfina had received express Orders from the Grand Seigneur to send all the forces he was able to spare into Morea, to be from thence transported to the assistance of the Visier.

Wague, Oct. 23. The 20th instant, the Count d'Estrade, Ambassadour from his Most Christian Majesty, went hence with much Ceremony and Train, attended on by several of the States Deputies, and 40 Coaches a League out of the Town, sending his Baggage before him towards Ecluse and Dunkirk, upon some Barks appointed by the States to attend him. The same Evening, he returned again hither privately and Incognito, and departed again yesterday, and embarked on one of the States Barks for Zealand on his return homewards. Before his departure he was presented by the Heer Heyd, in the Name of the States, with a Present of 6000 Livres, and his Secretary with a Chain of Gold, and Medal, to the value of 600 Livres.

The Lunenburghers are marching towards the Country of Brunswick: 'Tis said, that at the place of their Rendezvous they mutinied against their Officers, and killed several of them, upon pretence they had not dealt faithfully in paying them, what the States had allowed: and that many of them had since deserted their Colours, and were gone away, inso-much as the States are thinking of raising more Men, to compleat the numbers designed for the assistance of the Venetians.

The States Deputies designed for a Conference with the Count de Bentheim, are waiting the return of an answer to the States Letter, and an appointment of a time and place of meeting.

The Heer Boeselaer, the Bailly of Drenthe, being dead, some disputes are risen about the Election of his Successor, the City pretending to the Right, and the States to a custom of nominating to it, especially during the late times of trouble.

Orders are said to be issuing out for the sending several Forces to strengthen the Garrisons upon the Frontiers.

Whitchal, Octob. 17. On Thursday last, Her Majesty returned hither from Audley-end, and this day arrived here also His Majesty attended by several of his Nobility and principal persons of the Court.
