

T./Lt. Charles Gillott, Durh. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when defending part of a line with his platoon. Although wounded early in the attack, he remained with his men until hit for the third time. By his fine example of coolness and absolute disregard for personal safety, his platoon was enabled to inflict heavy losses on the enemy, and to hold them up until they had worked round the flanks.

Lt. Thomas Richard Kisbey Ginger, Yorks. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty throughout a fortnight's operations. On the first day his senior officers were killed, and in numerous rearguard actions he found himself in command of considerable bodies of men, which he always showed skill and initiative in handling.

T./Capt. William Brown Knox Glass, Lan. Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of the outpost line he kept the enemy in check for some six hours in spite of heavy machine-gun fire from both flanks, and then withdrew in a most orderly manner to a new line. Afterwards he went forward and carried in, under heavy fire, one of his platoon commanders who was severely wounded and would have been captured otherwise by the enemy.

2nd Lt. Ackroyd Gledhill, E. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. As intelligence officer to his battalion he was frequently entrusted with important missions, the carrying out of which entailed great danger. It was largely due to his untiring zeal and courage that it was possible to effect the withdrawal of the battalion, which at the time was extended over a frontage of 1,000 yards.

2nd Lt. James Gledhill, R.G.A., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. During an enemy attack he was on duty for twelve hours with the battery under shell fire and suffered many casualties, the major and second in command being killed. For an hour he acted as layer on a gun, and when only 2nd Lieuts. were left to fight the battery, it was in great measure due to his energy and fearlessness that the work was carried out under such trying conditions.

T./Lt. Rowland William Godley, R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in maintaining the railway service for three days by his untiring efforts and example, throughout a period of great strain.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Frederick Philip Godson, E. York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. With a party of twenty tunnellers he went forward to reinforce a machine-gun post holding out against a hostile attack, and took command of the post on the officer in charge being wounded. He bombed the enemy along the trench from the post, established a block, and held the position, with the greatest of courage, for twelve hours against repeated attacks.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Arthur Raymond Godwin, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in charge of a battery he continued to engage advancing enemy infantry until only one gun was left. He then took command of another battery and covered the retirement of our infantry, leaving the guns only at the last moment. He acted with superb courage and resource throughout the day.

Lt. Alec Harrison Goodall, Notts. & Derby. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in charge of Lewis gun detachments. He covered the withdrawal of a brigade to a new line with great tenacity, and then came back and placed himself at the disposal of an infantry battalion. He showed great pluck and ability.

2nd Lt. Harold Walter Goodson, Dorset. R., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in bringing up rations and ammunition under heavy fire and ensuring the supply of essentials to the front line. During the retirement he frequently returned to places already vacated and brought away articles necessary for the fighting efficiency of his battalion. Throughout the operations he displayed great energy and courage.

Lt. Frederick Goosey, Lond. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the brigade were practically surrounded he led them through the only possible route available, by compass-bearing, to the position they were ordered to occupy. His courage, coolness and quick grasp of the situation at this critical time undoubtedly saved a very serious situation.

2nd Lt. Alexander Gordon, D.C.M., M.M., R. Scots.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When sent up with battalion head-quarter units to clear up the situation in a village, he found the enemy were in it. He got his party into houses and on to the roofs, from which they could snipe, and held on to the place the whole afternoon. When relieved he took his men and filled a gap in the new line. His skilful action under heavy fire prevented the enemy breaking through.

Lt. (A./Capt.) Richard Gordon-Munro, Dn. Gds.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when acting as staff officer to a cavalry force. He kept touch personally between the various parties, thereby getting accurate information of the situation, and finally, when the position was attacked on three sides, he successfully conducted the withdrawal under a heavy machine-gun fire, remaining until the last section was clear. His initiative and total disregard of all danger was most marked throughout a strenuous operation.
