

T./Capt. (A./Maj.) Henry Moore, M.C.,
R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He went through heavy machine-gun and rifle fire to a dressing station which was being evacuated, and cleared a large number of wounded. He also took care to battery positions which were being shelled, and removed the wounded to safety. At the dressing stations during enemy bombardment he remained to the last, and saved many lives by his courage and devotion to duty.

Capt. (A./Maj.) Harold de Riemer Morgan,
E. Kent R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion with ability and energy during a trying time. Against heavy odds he stubbornly maintained positions, and showed fine leadership.

Capt. Arthur Morlidge, North'd Fus.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer set a magnificent example of leadership under very heavy bombardment and in the face of a powerful enemy attack. When the enemy had penetrated the line on his right, capturing battalion headquarters, he assumed command of the battalion, collected detached parties, and maintained a stubborn resistance, inflicting heavy casualties, until compelled to withdraw, which he did in good order, reorganising his command at each successive position.

T./Capt. William Moss, Linc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. In an attack on a trench this officer organised and directed the whole of the mopping up. On reaching the second objective, he directed operations skilfully and with coolness under heavy fire, maintaining communications with the rear. Although counter-attacked more than once, he held on until his supply of bombs gave out and his rifles were clogged with mud, when he carried out the withdrawal in a very able manner. Over 100 prisoners and three machine-guns were brought back, twenty-two machine-guns being destroyed, and no fewer than eighty dead being counted in one trench. He did splendid work.

T./Maj. Frederick James Mulqueen, M.C.,
R.E.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was sent up with his company to reinforce the line at a very difficult time. He was of the greatest assistance to the defence. His fearless bearing and gallantry stimulated all ranks and enabled the positions to be held for a long time, though repeatedly attacked by overwhelming numbers.

Capt. (T./Maj.) David Campbell Duncan
Munro, M.C., D.C.M., Gordon Highrs., attd.
L'pool R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded his battalion most efficiently throughout a week's operations. At a time when his men were suffering heavily from the bombardment, he was constantly among them encouraging them. It was due to his initiative that an important unoccupied post was seized, and later every attempt to retake it was frustrated. Another of his companies, after being shelled for two days, recaptured in a dashing manner a post of great importance.

Capt. (T./Lt.-Col.) Clive Murdoch, Yeo.,
attd. Hamps. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled his battalion with the greatest skill and coolness while withdrawing; he held on to positions as long as possible, and inflicted heavy loss on the enemy.

Maj. Ernest Puleston Nicholls, R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty while commanding his battery during an enemy attack. Under most difficult circumstances he fought off the enemy all day, and in the evening withdrew his battery with the loss of only one gun, which had been destroyed by shell fire. He showed great ability in command.

T./2nd Lt. Thomas Henry Oakden, Bord. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led attack after attack against enemy bombers with such success that his unit was able to maintain its position against great odds for over five hours, after the right flank had become enveloped. Subsequently he went forward with another officer to regain touch with troops on his right. When the officer with him was wounded he took charge of the party and successfully withdrew them to another line. Although given orders to withdraw as soon as relieved, he, without food or water, maintained his position for thirty-six hours, refusing to withdraw until relieved. He was wounded in the foot. His example of courage was exceptionally high.

2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Leonard Alfred Osborne,
M.C., Som. L.I.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer commanded a support company in the attack. Seeing that the leading companies were held up by machine-gun fire he led forward two of his platoons, and started section rushes, carrying the whole line forward by his example. He was the first to reach the objective, and the companies being then very mixed he took command of the whole, organising and consolidating the defence. Later, his skilful dispositions enabled a counter-attack to be broken.

T./Capt. Godfrey William Alan Park, E.
York. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer was in charge of the left forward flank of the line, where he displayed the greatest ability in reorganising the details and stragglers from other divisions, which were being absorbed as they came along, by the composite battalion with which he was serving. Under most difficult circumstances, his tireless energy and cheerful courage were an invaluable example to all ranks of his command, exhausted as they were with prolonged fighting. At a critical moment, though twice wounded, he rallied his men, and led them forward to restore the front after a personal reconnaissance under
