

Lt. Walter Aiken Lewis, M.C., R.F.A.,
Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Two hostile guns were brought into action 1,500 yards away and commenced shooting with open sights at a farm. He, from the top of the farm, succeeded in getting his battery in action on to the guns, and despite the fact that the house he was in was hit time after time, and the barn in front had been set fire to, he succeeded in silencing them and in successfully engaging the teams. By his courage and coolness he undoubtedly saved many lives and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy.

(M.C. gazetted 27th October, 1917.)

Lt. Kenneth James Hulme Lindop, M.C.,
Shrops. L.I., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, who had just joined the brigade staff as intelligence officer, carried out his duties most gallantly, watching from exposed points and riding out on solitary reconnaissances during twelve days' fighting. He constantly carried messages to the firing line under heavy fire, and did excellent work in rallying scattered men.

(M.C. gazetted 27th July, 1916.)

T./Capt. George Edwin Lindsay, M.C.,
M.B., R.A.M.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Not only did this officer carry out his professional duties with a cheerfulness that inspired all ranks, but on two occasions, regardless of personal danger, he continually attended wounded in the open under heavy machine-gun and rifle fire, only withdrawing when ordered to by his C.O.

(M.C. gazetted 26th September, 1917.)

T./2nd Lt. (A./Capt.) Harry Lonsdale,
M.C., N. Lan. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When the enemy was reported to have broken through on both flanks he organised an all-round defence, personally visiting the positions of his platoons under heavy bombardment and machine-gun and rifle fire. He later led a counter-attack, resulting in the retaking of a concrete machine-gun fortification and the capture of forty-six prisoners, including two officers. He behaved splendidly.

(M.C. gazetted 26th September, 1917.)

T./2nd Lt. Harold John Luckman, M.C.,
Worc. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He succeeded in getting back 500 yards under heavy machine-gun fire, and in delivering an important message. Later, it was largely due to him that a unit succeeded in withdrawing. Throughout the operations he rendered valuable services.

(M.C. gazetted 26th July, 1917.)

Capt. (A./Maj.) Cecil Eric Lewis Lyne,
M.C., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty when in command of a battery. When ordered to withdraw he led his teams over a bridge and through a village under heavy shell fire to the guns. There, being under rifle and machine-gun fire, he threw out flanking parties with Lewis guns and rifles to keep down the enemy fire. He got all his guns away and back over the bridge and into action in another position. He has commanded his battery with the greatest gallantry and coolness.

(M.C. gazetted 1st January, 1917.)

Lt. (A./Capt.) Alastair Hugh Macdonald,
M.C., Sea. Highrs.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as acting adjutant. When the commanding officer was wounded he took command of the battalion until the arrival of the second in command, and handled the men with great skill in the face of heavy fire. On one occasion he collected a party of disorganised men and reformed a new line, thereby saving a situation which was becoming serious. Throughout the operations he displayed great courage and maintained his calm demeanour at the most trying times, even when the enemy was almost through our lines.

(M.C. gazetted 18th July, 1917.)

T./Capt. (A./Maj.) Donald Mackay, M.C.,
R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy bombardment. He fought his battery until the enemy was within 300 yards, and did not leave the position till all the breech blocks and dial sights had been removed from the guns. A fortnight later he engaged the close approaching enemy over open sights, inflicting great casualties on them.

(M.C. gazetted 18th October, 1917.)

Lt. John Chiene MacKay, M.C., R.F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, with one other officer and one man, occupied an important bridge over a canal, armed with rifles, and in the face of heavy rifle and machine-gun fire from great numbers of the enemy, succeeded in defending the crossing for about an hour, until reinforcements came up.

(M.C. gazetted 18th June, 1917.)

Lt. (A./Maj.) William Drummond Mackintosh,
M.C., R.E., Spec. Res.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer filled a gap with his company in the front line, getting into touch with the units on the flanks, who were already falling back. Later he repulsed an enemy attack, and held the position all day under machine-gun, rifle and shell fire. The next night, finding there was a gap on his left, he went across at great risk to arrange to fill it, and was severely wounded returning.

(M.C. gazetted 3rd June, 1916.)

T./2nd Lt. (T./Capt.) Donald Rodrick
MacLaren, M.C., Gen. List, R.A.F.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty as a fighting pilot. He has recently destroyed no less than nine enemy machines, and proved himself a brilliant fighting pilot against enemy aircraft often far superior in number. He has done magnificent service, and set a splendid example to his patrol.

(M.C. gazetted 22nd June, 1918.)
