

attack he was directed in the evening to connect up with the right battalion. This he successfully accomplished after encountering great difficulties. The next morning he was the only officer left in the company, and skillfully repelled a strong enemy counter-attack, improving his position at the same time. For thirty-six hours he personally supervised and inspired his men.

Capt. George Alexander Gamblin, 2nd Divl. Amm. Col., Can. Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer's section suffered intermittent shelling, losing men and horses. He superintended the removal of men and horses, and by his coolness and judgment saved many lives, setting a fine example to the men.

Lt. Stanley Cyril Gee, 3rd Bn., Can. M.G.C.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer while commanding a battery of machine guns supporting the infantry attack, saw a gap in the line between two divisions. This he promptly filled, advancing with the first wave of the infantry. He captured sixty-five prisoners and five machine guns. By his prompt action he helped the infantry to gain and consolidate their objective.

Lt. William James Gibson, 47th Can. Bn., W. Ontario R.

For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership during an attack. He led his platoon with great dash under very heavy fire, and after gaining his objective led a patrol forward and brought back valuable information. Later in the day, while leading another patrol, he captured an enemy machine gun and prisoner, killing the remainder of the party. Throughout the operations he showed marked determination and courage.

Lt. Robert Steele Gillespie, D/23rd Bty., 5th Bde., Can. Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer brought his section forward immediately after the advancing infantry, bridging the front line system and cutting the wire in the way, under heavy barrage fire. He had his section in action in the enemy's lines one hour after the attack commenced.

Lt. Carl Seymour Gonnason, 3rd Bty., 1st Bde., Can. F.A.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource during an attack. He was in charge of an officer's patrol, and went forward with the infantry. He kept up communications with the rear in spite of heavy shell fire, and sent back valuable information. He also put in action two enemy guns, which he turned round and fired over 200 rounds himself into the retreating enemy.

Lt. Hedley John Goodyear, 102nd Can. Bn., 2nd Cent. Ont. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Totally regardless of danger, this officer led his platoon forward to the capture of a wood, which was stubbornly defended by machine-gun posts. When the other platoon commanders had become casualties, he reorganised their platoons and took charge of the skirmishing line, which he finally led in a charge, ensuring the success of the day's operation. He set a fine example of coolness and determination.

Lt. Edward Clarence Gordon, 4th Can. Bn., 1st Cent. Ont. R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer guided the battalion through a dense mist, enabling it to reach its position intact and on time. Later, he guided the left company in its attack on enemy machine-gun nests along a river bank, being wounded in the final successful assault. After having his wound dressed at the R.A.P., he returned to the firing line in time to lead his men up to a ridge, where he was again wounded. His conduct and daring throughout were admirable.

Lt. Leslie Farries Gordon, 50th Can. Bn., Alberta R.

For conspicuous gallantry and good leadership during an attack. When his company commander was wounded he took command and led the company forward under his own covering fire. Together with two men he rushed two machine-gun posts, capturing or killing the crews consisting of an officer and eleven other ranks. He set a splendid example to his men.

Lt. William Gordon, 25th Can. Bn., Nova Scotia R.

For conspicuous gallantry and leadership. Throughout the attack, which penetrated five miles into enemy territory, this officer handled his platoon with coolness and dash. He several times outflanked and captured enemy machine guns, keeping perfect direction and touch with the troops on his flanks through difficult country. His leading was largely responsible for the success of the operations.

Lt. Brooks Farrar Gossage, 58th How. Bty., 14th Bde., Can. Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. This officer, with another, made a daring reconnaissance of the brigade zone, being continually sniped from high ground and trees. They obtained the exact location of the infantry, when the information was urgently required, and cleared up an obscure situation.

Lt. George Roper Gouinlock, 15th Bty., 6th Bde., Can. Field Artillery.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Through an intense enemy barrage this officer made a reconnaissance of the front line and outpost line, gaining information which enabled his battery to destroy several machine-gun nests which were holding up the infantry. He continued this work the whole afternoon, on one occasion bringing in a wounded man from No Man's Land.

Capt. Roderick Douglas Graham, 85th Can. Bn., Nova Scotia R.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his company forward under heavy machine-gun fire, fighting his way foot by foot to the objective. He was everywhere among the men, organising bombing parties against machine-gun nests, and by his cheery encouragement kept them moving forward against a hail of machine-gun bullets.
