

Whitehall, July 23. 1696.

This Evening arrived here an Express from my Lord Berkeley, with Letters dated the 20th of this Month, off Ushant, which bring the Account that follows.

Published by Authority.

A Relation of the Bombarding of St. Martins and Ollone.

THE whole Fleet under the Command of the Right Honourable the Lord Berkeley sailed the 3d Instant from Ushant towards Bell-Iſle, and in the Afternoon, upon a Signal from the Admiral, Sir Martin Beckman with the Bomb-Vessels separated from the Fleet with a Convoy of 10 Men of War and 5 Fire-ships commanded by Captain Mees. On the 5th we arrived between 3 and 4 a clock in the Afternoon before St. Martins, where the Men of War came to an Anchor; But the Bomb-Vessels went in as far as they could go, which was about three quarters of a mile from the Town, where about Six they all sat fast on a soft Ground. Notwithstanding which, they began to bombard the Town about 9 at night, and continued it till 3 the next morning. After one hour's bombing, there appeared five several Fires in the middle of the Town, some were put out, but two continued with great and lofty Flames; At 3 in the morning the Bomb Vessels hauled off to refresh the Men, and to be recruited with all Necessaries. About 3 a clock in the afternoon, when the Tide served, Sir Martin Beckman fired in again, but more to the Eastward, about the same distance as before from the Town, and so bombarded it till 4 in the morning; The Town was all the while on fire in many places, and the two Fires first mentioned continued with considerable Augmentation, in so much that we all judge the greatest and the richest part of the Town was destroyed by Fire, or shattered in pieces by the Bombs, of which we fired two thousand two hundred and thirty, including in that number two hundred and sixty Carcasses. They fired from the Town with 18 Pieces of Cannon and 4 Mortars, but without doing us any damage. The 7th in the morning we gave over bombing of St. Martins, having left one of their Ships on fire in the Road, and brought away a Danish Flyboat laden with Brandy and Salt, upon suspicion of being French; We took also a Sloop going in, besides several Boats laden with Provisions, &c. The Town is well fortified, and as the Prisoners informed us, there was a Garrison in it of 1200 Men. From thence we sailed directly to Ollone, situated on the Main, where we arrived about 8 in the Evening; We began immediately to bombard that place, and after a little while some of the Houses which stand scattering took fire, and were burnt to the ground; About 12 a clock at night, it growing foggy, we left off bombing, and began again about two in the morning, when perceiving there were two several Towns divided by a River or Harbour half a quarter of a mile broad, Sir Martin placed seven Bomb-Ships against the North Town, and three against the South Town, and so bombarded them till half an hour past 5 in the evening: During this time the two Towns took fire in fifteen several places, and after some burning were put out, except three in the Town on the North side, which continued burning when we left it, and lasted all the night, after we were under sail, perceived by those that had the watch on board the Ships, which is to be imputed to the Violence of the increasing Flames, or to the blowing up of Houses to avoid the spreading thereof; The North side suffered most by reason of its being more closely built, and the best Houses were there. The Enemy had planted four Pieces of Cannon upon the Point going into the Harbour, from whence at our coming to Anchor the Commander of the Society Bomb-Ship, Captain Jennifer, was killed. We fired here Ninety Nine hundred ninety six Bombs and Carcasses with very good effect. The fairness of the Weather, and the light Moon, very much facilitated this short and successful Expedition; To which Sir Martin Beckman and Captain Mees contributed very much by their extraordinary Care and Diligence, being present both night and day in the hottest of the Action, to direct and encourage the Service; Which having thus performed, the Men of War and Bomb-Vessels rejoined the Fleet.

This Evening came in also a Mail from Holland with Letters of the 16th Instant from His Majesties Camp at Nivelles; They inform us that the Army was come to that place in two days march from Gemblours, and was to march again the 17th towards Soignies. The Marechal de Bouffiers decamped the 15th from St. Gerard, and was marching likewise on the other side of the Sambre towards Flanders. Part of our heavy Baggage was sent to Hall, and our Parties had cut off and taken several small Parties of the French on their march the 16th. The Landgrave of Hesse was with the German Forces at Namur, where they were to encamp till further Order.

They write from Piedmont that the French Army continued at Volvera, and the Allies at Moncalier; and that the Generals of the latter had refused to Sign the Cessation of Arms. On the Upper Rhine the Confederate Army continued at Zeireren; and the French at Oltosen. Two Regiments of Horse and Three of Dragoons of the Troops of the Elector Palatine were come into the Neighborhood of Francfort in their march to join the Germans. The Letters from Vienna of the 14th tell us, they had advice from Hungary that the additional Troops of Saxony being 4000 Men had joined the Imperial Army, which had thereupon passed the River Marosch, and advanced towards Temeswaer.
