Hamle 30, 309 31. The Treaty about the Hollien Affairs goes on but flowly; yet the Mediators hope to conclude it at last, having agreed on the principal Preliminaries. The Advices from Moseowy say, the Czar was engaged again in the Siege of Asof, which being a place of great Strength and Consequence, is like to be attacked and defended with all the vigour both fides are capable of. There is in it a numerous Ga-rison of Tartars, with Provisions for a long Siege; and whatever the issue may be, the present effect of it is, that it gives the Tartars a great Divertion, and hinders them from fending those Succors to the Turks for the War in Hungary, as otherwise they would be at liberty to do.

Paris, July 30. The Letters from the French Army in Catalogia of the 18th Instant say, they were fill encamped at Tordera; and the Spaniards at Offairie; But the Duke de Vendofnes, who commands the former, finding Providens began to grow scarce in his Camp, which would oblige him to march back towards Grome, and that after his Retreat the Garifons he had put into feveral small Places near the Sea-side, to Linder the Spaniards from receiving any Supplies that way, would not be able to defend themselves if attack'd, he had refolded to abandon the faid Places; and accordingly on the 16th he drew out the Garison of Cafield, having detached a Body of Horse from his Camp to cover them in their march; notwith. strading which they were attacked by a Party of Spaniards; and in the Skirmish the French lost about 25 Men, among whom were 4 Officers; They intended to quit in like manner Blancs, Pineia, and Malgrat. The Letters from Piedmont of the 22th rell us, that the Mareschal de Carinas had ordered Provisions to be laid up in feveral Places becween Pigneral and Brisnean for the ule of the Army in their repassage of the Mountains; which they would do, fo foon as the Forces of the Allies were retired out of Picamont.
