His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to confer the Decoration of the Albert Medal upon Frank Hopkins of Newport, Monmouthshire.

The following is an account of the services in respect of which the Decoration has been conferred:—

On the night of the 18th August, 1927, the s.s. "Cambrian Baroness" was lying ready to sail in South Lock at Newport, Mon., with a space of two or three feet between her side and the quay wall. At the last moment a fireman returning to the ship began to climb the pilot ladder but lost his hold and fell into the lock between the vessel and the wall of the lock. The ladder was lowered to the water and the man caught hold of it, but as the ladder was being hauled up his hold gave way and he fell back into the lock.

Among the bystanders on the quay was an unemployed seaman, Frank Hopkins. Seeing the accident Hopkins went down the ladder to the water level fifteen feet below. By the light of an electric torch from the ships' deck he caught hold of the fireman, who was now unconscious, and began to carry him up the ladder. The fireman was a dead weight and Hopkins progress was necessarily slow. As he was struggling up the ladder the vessel began to move towards the quay wall and someone shouted to Hopkins to let the man go and save himself. Hopkins replied "I have got him now and will bring him up." As soon as the fireman was within reach of men standing on the quay they hauled him into safety; Hopkins had barely managed himself to get up to the quay when the vessel closed with the wall. If he had been a few seconds later there is no doubt that he and the man he rescued would have been crushed to death.

Hopkins could have made sure of his own safety if he had given up his hold of the fireman. He knew quite well the risk he was running and knowing it saved the man.
