

Anjou and Berry, the Duke and Dutches of Orleans, and the Duke de Chartres, being introduced by Monsieur Saintor, Introducer of Ambassadors.

Whitehall, Nov. 5. His Majesty's Birth-day was celebrated on the 4th Instant with great Demonstrations of Affection and Loyalty to His Majesty's Royal Person and Government; On which occasion, the Nobility and other Persons of Quality waited upon their Royal Highnesses at St. James's, where his Highness the Duke of Gloucester had a Fire-work in the Evening, and the Court were afterwards entertained with a Ball. Whitehall, Nov. 6. This Evening came in a Post from Holland, by which we have Advice from Dieren of the first Instant O. S. that His Majesty came thither the 22nd day before from Le. and continued his Resolution to be at the Hague in a few days, and to embark for England by the latter end of the week following. That the Elector of Bavaria would set out that day for Brussels. The Earl of Jersey was arrived there from Paris, and Monsieur d'Olyke was likewise come to wait upon His Majesty from the Hague. The Letters from Vienna say, that my Lord Page's Secretary was come to Futack with an Account, that the Mediators intended to set out from Belgrade the 19th of October, and that the Turkish Ministers would follow the 24th; whereupon the Imperial and Venetian Ambassadors resolved to go from Surack to Carlowitz about the same time, and the Ambassadors of Poland and Muscovy, who are at Peter-Waradin, would likewise repair thither; And 'tis said, that as soon as the Turkish Plenipotentiaries are passed the Sive, the Grand Vicer will begin to march home with his Forces. They write from Berlin of the 4th of November, that the Elector of Brandenburg not having received an Answer from the Magistrates of Elbing to his Satisfaction, had sent Orders to General Brandt, who had posted himself with about 8000 Men near the Town, to bombard it, in case the Magistrates persisted in their Refusal to receive a Garison of his Forces. The Letters from Madrid of the 24th of October by the way of Brussels say, the King of Spain continued in good Health, and was gone to a House 3 Leagues distant from Madrid, to divert himself with Hunting.
