London, June 27.

His Excellency the Count Gudensleu, Ambassador from his Majesty of Denmark is lately arrived here incognito, but as yet appears not in publick to see his train be landed and fitted for his attendance

NAPLES, June 21st: The Squadron of the Papal Gallies having been obliged by weather to put in at Castell a Mare, continued there 2 Days, and the instant putt out again to sea bending their course for Messina, where they are to joyn with the Squadron of Malta, being furnish'd during their alledge therewith some fresh provisions, and a supply of above 100 slave. For the use of the Gallies

The 3 Gallies sent with some Companies of foot to Sardinia for the assistance of the Duke Roy of that Island are returned hither.

Rome, June 15th: The French Gallies arrived lately at Civita Vecchia in their way to Sardinia upon the news whereof, the Pope receiv'd much satisfy, as conceiving great hopes of the success of their success in this expedition, in testimony whereof he sent th<sup>e</sup> Gasaldo the Commissioner-General of his Army, with several other Persons to compliment the Marquis de Vivonne the Captain of that Squadron, presenting him with all sorts of Presents for himself and people, with several Medals of Gold & Silver & divers things of devotion, to be distributed amongst his officers & principal persons aboard the said Gallies, the Venetian Ambassador sent also his Secretary with his Compliments to the Captain.

By the way of Otranto we have letters of the 19th past from Candia, informing us that the Turks had sprung a Mine under the Palace of St. Nicholas by which one half of it was ruined, but had not the courage to storm, but endeavoured to maintain the place by their Grandees, one of which breaking in the air, mortally wounded the Procurator-General Catterino Cornaro in his Flank, who yet lived about an hour after it, receiving the Sacrament, & then expired with much chearfullness, encouraging all about him to maintain their place to the utmost: and that the Difcier having news of his death, sent immediately to the Town to know to them to surrender, but the messenger continued long within the Kingdom, as had done the was 2<sup>d</sup> with a short answe<sup>r</sup> that they wanted no Resident from Brandenbourg, who had spent near yet many excellent & undaunted Commanders under whose conduct they doubt not but they should be able to defeat the place against all the Ottoman power; the former letters allding, that since the loss of their excell<sup>e</sup> Office, the Garrison hath received fresh courage and life by the arrival of the Count de Valence with above 1500 Germans, with several other Companies of foot & a large supply of all necessaries,

Warsaw, June 1st, On Wednesday last the Deputies for the Po. polite Russians arriv'd here with a Train of several 1000 men, which gave a great advance to the affairs of this great Assembly, insomuch as they the same day gave audience to several Ambassadors & Foreign Ministers, and amongst others to an Envoy of Tartary, whom they received, with much honour, & had prepared a Carpet for him that he might seat himself according to the Eastern fashion, but her refusall<sup>t</sup> took a Chair whereon he placed himself, not ouerhaling to stir his Bonnet, or take any notice at all of the Assembl<sup>y</sup>; this want of Civility occasion'd the laughter of several persons, which the Envoy observing, in much anger he told them he knew how to laugh as well as any among them, & immediately foring a loud laughter, w<sup>t</sup> out of the Assembly, wh<sup>t</sup> with a much louder, & better occasioned laughter, bore him company in his mirth till he was out of sight. Yesterday the said Deputies from the Po. polite Russ<sup>s</sup> appeared at the Diet, wherein upon a motion it was agreed that the Assembly shold be continued for 7 or 8 days longer, or if occasion required till the year of St. John Baptist.

Dantzick, June 15th: From Warsaw we are advised by Letters of the 8th in Int<sup>r</sup>, that the Marshal of Poland has moved in the Diet that several points may be insisted of as obligatory to the succeeding King, 1. That he shall habit himself according to the custom and fashion of that Kingdom, and if he be not a native shall as soon as may be learn the language.

2. That he shall not hearken to any Proposals of marriage, or at least, take a wife without the consent of the States.

3. That when married, th<sup>e</sup> Queen shall not interest herself in state aff'rs.

4. That the Salic Law shall be of force in Poland as it is in France so th<sup>e</sup> no Female shall succeed to the Crown.

5. That whoever shall be elected to the Crown, shall engage never to resign it, to which som<sup>e</sup> other desired might be added, that only the Natives should be preferred to Offices and places of Trust, and that for of futures no Foreign Minister should be permitted to

since the late for the exelusion of the Prince of Pomer<sup>y</sup> the French Ambassador pretending some indisposition, has not desired his publick audience, as have done several other Ministers, but that all the favour of that interest having been labouring to obtain a reocation of the exelusion, tho' with little probability of success.
