Vienna, July 25. N. S.

Three Deputies are arrived here from the Bishopsricks of Trent and Brixen, and some other of the Principal Districts in those Parts, to assure the Emperor, That they will faithfully adhere to his Interest, and to desire a speedy Assistance against the Bavarians; and had Audience of his Imperial Majesty the 23d Instant: The chief of them is the Count de Kunigl, Brother to the Lieutenant of Tirol, who is making a very good Defence with a Body of Peasants, whom he has got together near the foot of the Mountain of Brenner, not far from Brixen. We hope that by this time the Counts de Solari and Gutzenseyn may be joined together, and may be able not only to put a stop to the Elector of Bavaria's Progresses in those Parts, but also to prevent his being reinforced from Italy; for which purpose (it is said) the Duke of Vendosme has detached 4000 Men to Goiso, and as many to Castiglione delle Scivare, who are to take their March along the River Göise, on the West Side of the Lake di Garza, through the Pass called Rocca a' Anfo, and by the Val de Leder into Tirol. We hear the Town of Bersello, after having made a long and vigorous Defence, begins at length to want Provisions; so that we fear it may fall into the hands of the Enemy. The Bishop of Raab is lately arrived here from Colgne. The Prince de Parcia, who was lately appointed the Emperor's Ambassador to the Czar of Moscovy, is preparing for his Departure thither. Count Guido of Starckenberg, who in Prince Eugene's absence, has the chief Command of the Emperor's Forces in Italy, is declared Velt-Marshal.

Ratisbonne, July 20. Our Letters from Bavaria give an Account, That that Elector having received several Advices, that the Duke of Vendosme was approaching with a strong Detachment of the French Forces in Italy to his Assistance, he broke up with his Army on the 20th Instant from Innsbruck, and encamped that evening at Murray; The next day he proceeded to the Mountain of Brenner, where the necessary Dispositions were making for attacking the Pass of Clausen, and some other Passes thereabouts, which were guarded by 7 Battalions of the Imperial Regular Troops and Militia: But in the night he received 3 Expresses from the Baron de Preilmeyer, his first Minister at Innsbruck, with the unexpected News that several Thousand Peasants, with a few Officers and Soldiers disguised in their Habits, had taken Arms, and had attacked and cut in pieces the Bavarian Garrison of Cziern, and had made themselves Masters of Scharnitz. Captain Seaine, who was left there with 200 Militia, having made little or no Defence; That from thence they advanced to Hull, and upon their summoning that Place, the Inhabitants munitied, and soon cut off the few Bavarian Forces that were in Garrison there, together with their Commander, the Count de Verita, who was appointed to be Commandant of Tirol for the Elector; That Lieut. Col. Wmaerlich, Governor of Ratzenburg, and Captain Bauer, the Elector's best Engineer, being sent for to Innsbruck, and ignorant of what had passed, were also taken into the hands of the Country People, who put them to death; That these Peasants had resolved to proceed to Innsbruck, and to destroy all the Bavarians they could meet with; And lastly, that the whole Country was privy to this Design, and ready to join them. The Elector in this imminent Danger was forced to take a sudden Resolution of commanding all the Dragoons of his Army to return immediately to Innsbruck, which they did with great diligence, and came time enough to prevent the Peasants; the whole Army followed with all possible speed, and arrived the same evening in their former Camp; where having rested a few hours, a Detachment was sent out early the next morning under the Command of the Count de Sansse, which attacked Cziern and Scharnitz, and retook both those Places, after about two hours Resistance, and no quarter was given to 3 or 400 Peasants that were found there; The Bavarians themselves own above 100 Men lost on their side in this Dispute: The Elector with his main Army also fell upon the Body of the Peasants which was posted near Hull, and routed them, after they had made a vigorous Resistance, and lost 800 of their Men; and he pursued them into the Mountains. Then he attacked Hull, and was twice repulsed; but the Bavarians pretend that there is Advice of his having taken that Place, after the third Assault, and that he gave it into the hands of the French, who plundered and burnt it: The Elector ran great hazard of losing his Life in this Expedition, Count Ferdinand d'Arco, a Colonel, and Gentleman of his Chamber, having been killed very near him by a Peasant, who mistook him for the Elector, because he had on a very fine Suit of Clothes. What other Loss the Bavarians may have sustained in these several Engagements is not yet known, but it must certainly be very considerable; And the Country People are so exasperated, that there is no doubt but, as soon as they can be seconded by the regular Troops, they will do their utmost Endeavour to drive the Bavarians out of their Country: And there is greater hopes at present than ever, that the Elector will be disappointed in his Designs on that side.

Frankfort, July 31. The Duke of Burgundy repassed the Rhine the 28th Instant, and seems again to threaten Landau or Philipsbourg, it we may believe what the French give out, of great Preparations making at Strasbourg, in order to some Siege: But the general Opinion is, that these Marches and Countermarches are purely designed to amuse the Imperialists, and that the French Army is not in a condition to attempt any thing of moment: An Officer who deserted from them, and arrived here this morning, affirms, that they are not above 20000 strong, and those too in a very bad condition; And it is very probable that General Thungen has the same Account, since Major-General Geer is detached from the Lines of Stolhoffen with 5 Dutch and 3 Hessian Battalions of Foot to join Prince Lewis or Baden, as are also two Regiments of Horse and three of Dragoons. When his Highness is joined by this Reinforcement, and by the Forces of Prussia and Westphalia, and another Body of 5000 Men, commanded by the Count de la Tour, who is advanced as far as Ebingen, we may then expect to hear of some considerable Enterprize: His Highness continues as yet in his former Camp on the Danube, as the French Forces under the Marshal de Villars do also in theirs. The latter have sent out a Detachment of 5000 Men towards Ulm, to observe the Count de la Tour, and to secure their Convoys of Provisions. General Vaubome has detached 1500 Horse from Italy into the Country of Tirol, to join the Count de Solari, who has already got together 10 Battalions of regular Forces.

Cologne, August 3. A Party of about 50 Men of the Garrison of Luxembourg came out of that Place the first Instant at night; Yesterday by break of day they surprised the flying-Bridge at Mulheim, and broke into a little Fort guarded by 4 Men, whom they took Prisoners, set fire to the Fort, and then returned home. The Preparations are continued at Wesel for the Bombarding of Guelder. Our Letters from the Upper Rhine bring Advice of the Duke of Burgundy's having repassed that River: The Discourse continues that he is to send a strong Detachment to reinforce the French Army in Flanders.

Hamburg, August 3. The King of Denmark came yesterday to Geluckstadt, and intends in 3 or 4 days to set out on his return to Copenhagen. Letters from Prussia say, the King of Sweden continued with his Army before Thoon; That the Garrison made a Sally on the 17th past, but were beat back with considerable Loss; and that the Town having been so long blocked up by the Swedes, began to want many necessaries, and the Burghers to be dissatisfied, and to talk of surrendering. It is said several Ships were come from Sweden into the Road of Dantzick, with Reinforcements for the Swedish Army.

From the Camp at Houthalen, August 6. On the 1d Instant the two Armies under the Command of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough marched from Vorselaer to Lichter and Kassel, the head Quarters being at Tielen. The 4th we passed over the River Nethe, on several Bridges made for that purpose; and came to Nell and Balen, where we rested yesterday; And this day we marched about 6 Leagues, and are now encamped with cer Right at Haukston, and our Left at Samborn; from whence we shall continue our March to-morrow towards Borchloen, to which end Orders are given for laying the Bridges this night over the Semer. We have Advice, that the Enemy decamped likewise from Wieneghem the 2d Instant, and that they are come towards Diest, to observe our March, keeping still within their Lines.

Hague, July 7. N. S. Our homeward-bound East-India Fleet is lately arrived, which consists of 11 Sail of Merchant Ships from Batavia, and 4 from Ceylon; An English East-India Ship is also come with them, that is said to be the Bedford, which was given over for loff. The Fleet of Merchant Ships bound from Roserdam to England sailed the 5th Instant, under Convooy of part of the Dutch Squadron commanded by Admiral Callemberg, which lay at Schonevelt. There has happened a Mutiny at Amersfort, whereupon some Troops are ordered thither to suppress it.

Dublin, July 24. His Grace the Duke of Ormonde, Lord Lieutenant of this Kingdom, returned hither the 20th Instant from his Progress, great Respect having been paid him in all the Places through which he passed. This day his Grace went 12 Miles off to review Major-General Langston's Regiment of Horse, and returned hither in the evening.

Falmouth, July 25. Her Majesty's Ships the Woolwich and Swan came into this Harbour last night from the Eastward, with three Coasters from the Lie of Wight, and are to convoy our Lin Ships and other Merchant Men bound to London, which are preparing to sail.

Several of the Men belonging to Her Majesty's Ship the Southern, which came lately to Charlem to rest, being now absent from their Duty without Leave, although the said Ship is ready to go to Sea; And whereas the Men which did belong to the Salisbury are ordered aboard the Nottingham, and the Lullowick and Muscovia Merchant Storeships Men aboard the Warwick, both which Ships are in Longreach; and many of the said Men having not yet made their appearance on board, whereby those Ships are very much hindered in their proceeding on necessary Services; His Royal Highness's Prince George of Denmark, Lord High Admiral of England, &c. does hereby strictly require the said Men to repair immediately to, and continue at, their Duty on board those Ships; for that otherwise they will not only forfeit the Wages due to them, but be proceeded against with utmost severity; whereas if they do appear, they will be paid their said Wages before they sail from the Nore.
