Distinguished Flying Cross.

Flight Lieutenant Keith Alexander MARTIN (033134), Royal Australian Air Force, No. 77 (I.F.) Squadron.

Although Flight Lieutenant Martin has served with No. 77 Squadron since 7th January, 1952, only, he has already flown on 84 operational missions in Meteor aircraft. He has led his Squadron on a large number of occasions in low level attacks against enemy targets in the Sarawon and Singye areas and, in the face of heavy concentrations of anti-aircraft fire, he has repeatedly pressed home attacks with courage and determination after sustaining damage to his own aircraft. Flight Lieutenant Martin's leadership has been of the highest order and his devotion to duty and personal example have been in keeping with the highest traditions of the Royal Australian Air Force.

Distinguished Flying Medal.

A.33635 Sergeant Robert Andrew STRAWBRIDGE, Royal Australian Air Force, No. 77 (I.F.) Squadron.

Sergeant Strawbridge has flown on 125 operational missions in Meteor aircraft since he joined No. 77 Squadron eight months ago. He has led sections on a large number of low level attacks against heavily defended enemy targets in the Sarawon and Singye areas in North Korea. During January and February alone, this pilot flew on 70 operational missions and, although his aircraft was damaged on a number of occasions by ground fire, he continued to display aggressiveness, a fine fighting spirit and great devotion to duty. By his efforts in the air and his cheerfulness under adverse and trying conditions on the ground, Sergeant Strawbridge has set a fine example to all and he has done much to make possible the fine effort of No. 77 Squadron in flying 1,776 missions during January and February, 1952.
