FRIDAY, 13 SEPTEMBER, 1957

Whitehall, September 13, 1957.

Lord Chamberlain's Office,
St. James's Palace, S.W.1.

13th September, 1957.

The QUEEN made the following speech when Her Majesty attended the opening of the 46th Conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in Westminster Hall on September 12th, 1957:—

It gives me great pleasure to be able to attend the opening of the 46th Conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union and I extend a warm welcome to the representatives of National Parliaments from all over the world.

This great Hall of Westminster is the birthplace of British Parliamentary institutions. The first Parliament was summoned here seven hundred years ago and many great events in the history of Parliament and nation have taken place within these walls. This Hall bears witness to the durability of the system and it is therefore a most suitable choice for this meeting of the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

I am proud to say that political life in all the nations of the Commonwealth, of which I am the Head, is based on Parliamentary Government. We regard it as both the proof and the guardian of our democracy. It may not please all the people all the time, but it is essential if the individual is to remain free and all are to be equal before the law.

The Parliament at Westminster has seen many changes and survived many crises. It has adapted itself to the conditions of each succeeding age without loss of vitality or strength. This has happened because there have always been men who have realized that it is the principle of Parliamentary Government that is important and principles are only kept alive by people who believe in them passionately.

Other nations have developed political Assemblies in different ways with a great diversity of form and function, but the fact that so many are represented in this Union is a solid expression of faith in Parliament as the first and principal instrument of democracy.

Sixty-seven years ago, at your first meeting in London, a resolution of the Union recorded your belief that "closer relations between the members of the various Parliaments would make for peace". Subsequent events have not been very encouraging but everyone here today knows the potential truth of these words. The Union brings you together, not as representatives of Governments but as representatives of Parliaments. You are all men and women in public life with obligations and duties to those whose interests you represent in the counsels of your own countries. Whatever differences may exist between the nations you, at this meeting, have much in common.

If this Union can help you understand each other's problems and points of view, if it can help you to advance those forms of Government and standards of international dealing which we know to be right, then we may yet win that concord among the nations which has been sought for so long and which we need so urgently today.

I wish your discussions every success at this the 46th Conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased, on the recommendation of Colonel the Earl Fortescue, the Captain, to make the following promotions in, and appointment to, Her Majesty's Body Guard of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms:—

Lieutenant-Colonel the Most Honourable James Arthur Norman, Marquess of Ormonde, M.C., Clerk of the Cheque and Adjutant, to be Lieutenant, in the room of Major Sir Henry Lancelot Aubrey-Fletcher, Bt., D.S.O., M.V.O., retired.
