CENTRAL CHANCERY OF THE ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD

St. James's Palace, London S.W.1.
28th July 1964.

The QUEEN has been graciously pleased to give orders for the undermentioned appointments to the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, for the following awards of the British Empire Medal, and for the publication in the London Gazette of the names of those specially shown below as having received an expression of Commendation for their brave conduct.

To be Additional Members of the Civil Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, for Gallantry:

John ELSON, Clerk, Sudbury, Middlesex, Branch, Midland Bank Limited. (Twickenham.)

Alan Michael NOTTLE, First Cashier, Sudbury, Middlesex, Branch, Midland Bank Limited. (Pinner.)

Geoffrey William PRATT, Manager, Sudbury, Middlesex, Branch, Midland Bank Limited. (Wembley.)

Two men, each armed with a pistol, entered a bank and closed the door behind them. Whilst one remained near the door on the public side of the counter, the other man who was masked, climbed on to the counter and ordered Mr. Nottle to move away. Mr. Nottle, after closing the till, backed away towards the counter door near the Manager's office. The gunman followed him and when he reached the Manager's office Mr. Nottle threw a cup of tea at him. The intruder then entered the office where Mr. Pratt was seated at his desk. When ordered out of the office Mr. Pratt, although threatened by the pistol, immediately pressed the alarm switch. The man fired a shot at Mr. Pratt which penetrated his neck. Although seriously injured Mr. Pratt attempted to dial 999 before he collapsed. The gunman meanwhile left the Manager's office and went to the counter till which he tried to open. Mr. Nottle then threw an ash-tray at him which resulted in a shot being fired in his direction, the bullet penetrating a steel stationery cabinet. Mr. Elson, who was working at the back of the bank premises, on seeing the man brandishing the gun, threw an adding machine at him. It struck him on the head but did not stop him. The man then got back on to the counter, fired another shot at random which penetrated a wooden partition. The two men then hurried out of the bank without stealing any property and made good their escape. Mr. Pratt was taken to hospital in a critical condition and operated on immediately. Mr. Nottle and Mr. Elson, both of whom were fully aware that they were dealing with desperate gunmen, risked their lives when, in the face of imminent danger, they tried to impede one of the thieves by throwing objects at him.

To be an Additional Member of the Civil Division of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, for Gallantry:

Frank WHITE, Superintendent, Manchester City Police Force.

Awarded the British Empire Medal for Gallantry, (Civil Division):

James Munro ADAMS, Constable, Manchester City Police Force.

Francis MATTHEWS; Masseur, Lower Kersal, Salford.

A man climbed on to the parapet of the 12th floor of a building and threatened to jump into the street. The Police and Fire Brigade were called and Superintendent White and Constable Adams made their way to a ledge about six feet away from the parapet. Adams made several attempts to get on to the parapet occupied by the man but each time he did so the man moved away and appeared about to throw himself from the building. The Superintendent and the Constable made repeated efforts to persuade the man to come down but without success and it was apparent that no direct approach could be made to seize him owing to the extreme danger of falling into the street 150 feet below. The Police Officers were joined by Mr. Matthews who talked to the man who then moved his position slightly. Immediately Matthews, followed by Superintendent White and P.C. Adams, leapt across on to the small ledge and caught hold of the man by his arms and tried to pull him back. There was a struggle and all were in danger of falling off the parapet. Still struggling the man was pushed on to another ledge and other helpers, wearing safety belts, were then able to reach him and pull him through a window into the building.

Awarded the British Empire Medal for Gallantry, (Civil Division) :

Arthur Alec DAWTON, Fireman, London Fire Brigade. (Ruislip.)

A fire broke out at a building of five floors and a basement. On the arrival of the brigade the first floor was well alight but people could be seen at a third floor window. An escape was pitched with difficulty and although there was dense smoke at the head of the escape Fireman Dawton ascended and succeeded in helping two women and a man on to the escape. An elderly woman remained in the building and was unable to climb out as the others had done. When she fainted Fireman Dawton entered the room where despite blinding smoke, intense heat and falling and burning debris, he attempted to lift the woman on to his back preparatory to climbing down the escape. On account of her weight he was unable to do this, but managed to pass the still unconscious woman through the window to a Sub-Officer at the head of the escape. There is little doubt that the four people, and particularly the elderly woman, were saved because of the courage and determination displayed by Fireman Dawton.

Hubert Leslie EVANS, Building Contractor, St. Davids.

A mentally deranged man, who had been involved in a shooting incident earlier in the day, was seen walking down a street carrying a 12 bore gun. Mr. Evans, who knew the man and was fully aware of what had happened, suggested to the Police that he should try and reason with him, and to disarm him. This was agreed and shortly after Evans saw the man walking down the road. He approached him and after a few words grabbed hold of the gun, opened it, and took out two live cartridges. The man demanded the return of the gun, but Evans refused and a violent struggle started. A policeman then came to the aid of Evans and after a further struggle the man was overpowered and arrested.

Lyll Bernard WILKINSON, Farm Labourer, West Wyalong, New South Wales.

Mr. Wilkinson went to the side of a shed where a man pointed a rifle at him and warned him that if he tried to run he would shoot. Wilkinson was then forced to drive a car on to the highway. The police were informed of the incident and organised a pursuit. A constable gave chase and at one stage drove alongside Wilkinson's car but seeing the gunman with the rifle at his shoulder and aiming at him, the constable dropped back but continued to follow at speeds at times between 70 and 80 miles per hour. During the chase over many miles the gunman informed Wilkinson of his intention to shoot the constable. On one occasion he directed Wilkinson to stop the car and three shots were fired at the constable who had stopped about 100 yards away and was standing beside his car. On two further occasions Wilkinson was ordered to stop so that the man could shoot the constable, but the police car did not stop close enough. The gunman then directed Wilkinson to turn the car around and go back. The constable seeing the car drive towards him, parked his car diagonally across the road and took cover behind a gate post. Wilkinson was ordered to drive in front of the constable's car but he defied the order and drove his car to the rear of the police car. The gunman then climbed across into the front seat and aimed the rifle in front of Wilkinson in the direction of the constable. The car was then travelling at a slow speed. Wilkinson released the steering wheel, grabbed the barrel of the rifle and commenced to struggle for possession of the weapon. He succeeded in wresting the rifle from the gunman and threw it through the driver's window. At the same time, the nearside door of the car came open and Wilkinson, using his foot, forced the gunman out on to the roadway. The gunman commenced to run away and was followed by the constable who fired a shot over his head but he did not stop and after a further warning a second shot was fired which struck the gunman in the back of the head.
