It is said, Monsieur Huguetan propos'd this Method of sinking the Credit of France; and a late Accident convinces us how sensible that Court is of the Disadvantages which must arise to them from his Proposal. A Band of Ruffians, who, according to their own Confession, were to have had a Reward of 30000 Pistoles, had engag'd themselves, under the Conduct of one Gautier a French Officer, to bring into France the said Monsieur Huguetan: For the Execution of their Project they had laid in Horses at several Stages between this Place and Aix la Chapelle, under Pretence of conveying thither a distracted Person of Quality; but with a Design of carrying their intended Prisoner to Namur. The Pensionary having private Intelligence of the whole Affair, order'd Gautier to be apprehended; as also a Servant of Monsieur Huguetan, who had been hir'd to betray his Master. They both confess'd the Fact: And there are Directions sent to the Frontiers, to take the rest of their Accomplish; which have been so well executed, that they have already seiz'd another of them, besides 14 of their Horses, and a Calash, that were to be employ'd on that Occasion. Our last Letters from Milan say, Prince Eugene had detach'd Four German Regiments, consisting of 8000 Men, to be embark'd at Genoa, and transported to Provence.
