DISEASES OF ANIMALS ACT 1950

Notice is hereby given in pursuance of section 85 (3) of the Diseases of Animals Act 1950 that the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Scotland, acting jointly, have made the following Order:—

STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS 1973 No. 1377

The Transit of Animals (General) Order 1973

(made 2nd August 1973)

This Order which comes into operation on 1st September 1973, introduces a number of general measures intended to safeguard the welfare of a wide variety of animals during their carriage by sea, air, road and rail. For the purposes of the Order, the definition of "animals" contained in the Diseases of Animals Act 1950 is extended so as to include all mammals (other than man) and any kind of four-footed beast which is not a mammal, together with all fish, reptiles, crustaceans, and other cold-blooded creatures. As a result of a similar extension of the definition of "poultry" in the 1950 Act, the Order also covers birds of any species.

Existing legislation covering the carriage of farm animals, horses and domestic poultry by sea, road and air is not affected by the Order, so that its provisions only apply to these animals in respect of their carriage by air.

In relation to the carriage of animals by sea or air, the Order applies to any animal carried on a vessel or aircraft to or from a port or airport in Great Britain, whether or not the animal is loaded or unloaded at that port or airport. Its requirements are, therefore, enforceable in respect of animals which are merely passing through this country, or call here en route for elsewhere.

The Order places a general duty on carriers and other persons in charge of animals during carriage to ensure that its provisions are applied to those animals in a manner appropriate to their species. A further duty is then imposed on those concerned with the loading, unloading and carriage of animals to ensure that these operations are carried out in such a way as will ensure that the animals are not caused injury or unnecessary suffering and such persons are also required to guard against the risk of injury or suffering arising from a number of specified causes.

Other provisions of the Order deal with the feeding, watering and general care of animals during carriage, and with their accommodation in vessels, aircraft or vehicles. There are also special requirements with regard to the carriage of animals in receptacles.

The loading or carriage of unfit animals, or of animals which are likely to give birth during carriage, is prohibited, except where permitted by a veterinary inspector of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the Order also provides for the way in which animals which are injured during carriage are to be dealt with.

Inspectors of the local authority and of the Ministry are authorised to require, by notice, the unloading of animals out of vessels, aircraft or vehicles where they have grounds for believing that the carriage of such animals, or their further carriage, is likely to cause injury or unnecessary suffering, and such inspectors are given similar powers in respect of animals which they have reason to believe are unfit or likely to give birth during carriage.

Copies of the above-mentioned Order may be obtained from Her Majesty's Stationery Office, 49 High Holborn, London W.C.1, price 8p.
