Milan, March 4. N. S.

COUNT Zinzendorf is set out for Genoa, from whence he designs to sail to Barcelona. The Imperial Commissaries earnestly solicit the Princes of Italy, that are Feudatory to the Empire, immediately to advance their Proportions for defraying the Expence of the War. The Duke of Parma hath already paid his Contribution. The Great Duke of Tuscany insists on an abatement of what hath been laid on him the preceding Years, and Monsieur Landini is arrived here with Instructions to Negotiate that Affair; but it is uncertain whether any Compliance will be made to his Demands, until the return of Lieutenant-Colonel Littau. The Marquis Graneri continues in this City in expectation of the Emperor's Answer to the Demands of the Duke of Savoy, and the final Resolutions of the Court of Vienna concerning the Differences between his Imperial Majesty and his Royal Highness. The Imperial Court hath demanded an Account of our Regency of the Expences when the Queen of Spain passed through this Place on her Journey to Barcelona; and it is expected that all the Charges on that occasion will be deducted out of the Contributions laid on this State, or otherwise defrayed by his Imperial Majesty. Letters from Rome say, that the Pope had filled up the Vacancy of eighteen Bishopricks, besides a great number of Abbeys; that he had given the Bishoprick of Palestrina, vacant by the Death of Cardinal Portocarrero, to Cardinal Spada, and made the Archbishop of St. Vitate Legate of St. Urbino. These Letters add, that his Holiness made a very pathetick Speech at that Consistory, setting forth what Injuries the Holy See had received by the contending Princes for the Monarchy of Spain, what Prejudice had been done to the Roman Church by these Divisions, and particularly what uneasiness and disturbance they had occasioned to the Court of Rome. They write from Naples, that notwithstanding the Difficulties they met with in raising Money, it was not doubted, but by the application of Cardinal Grimani, their full Quota of Men would be raised, and sufficient quantities of Corn be provided for their Subsistence, before the arrival of those Vessels that are appointed to transport them to Catalonia. The Clergy of that Kingdom will be obliged to contribute towards the raising of the necessary Sums for the Service of his Catholick Majesty.
