Turin, March 18. N. S. The Horses bought by his Royal Highness's order in Germany to recruit his Cavalry, begin to arrive, and the Recruits for the Foot have join'd their respective Regiments. Our Letters from the Frontiers confirm our former Advices, that the French King had sent Orders for the Troops under the Duke of Noailles in Catalonia to return into Dauphiné; and add, that most of those Troops were already arriv'd in Provence, where they had Quarters of Refreshment assign'd 'em, and where the Cavalry were remounted by the Jews, who had bought Horses in Switzerland for that purpose. They write from Florence, that the Prince of Tuscany's Distemper increaseth daily, insomuch that they begin to despair of his Recovery.

Brussels, April 6. N. S. Letters from Saragossa of the 16th of March advise, that the Duke of Anjou's Court was to remain at that Place during the Operations of the ensuing Campaign. General Staremberg has put strong Garrisons into the Towns of Gardona, Manresa and Monblancq. These Posts effectually cover Barcelona and Tarragona, and contribute very much to the Subsistence of the Cavalry, by securing all the Tract of Country between those two Cities. We are inform'd by Letters of the 4th from Valenciennes, that the Enemy continue to work hard on their Lines along the Schelde towards Bouchain, which Place they greatly apprehend will be besieg'd, and are therefore very busy in repairing the Fortifications, and preparing it for a Defence, having lately transported Ammunition thither from Valenciennes. Our Advices from Paris make mention of the late Tumults at St. Omer, the Garrison of which Place having not receiv'd their Pay for a considerable time, plunder'd the Bakers Shops, and committed several other Disorders before the Governor was able to appease them.

Hague, April 7. N. S. The Convoy with the Yatchs and Recruits from England, arriv'd on our Coasts on Saturday last, but the Wind being contrary, they were not able to put into the Meuse 'till the Day following; for which reason his Grace the Duke of Argyle was oblig'd to get on Board a Fisher-Boat, which landed him on Saturday at a Place call'd Katwick. The next Day his Grace set out from this Place for Rotterdam, and propos'd to proceed to Utrecht this Morning in his way to Spain. There being no appearance that the Campaign will be open'd very soon, his Grace the Duke of Marlborough will continue here some time longer. Our last Letters from Vienna advise, that the Prince of Savoy had sent away his Baggage, and intended to set out himself for the Hague soon after the Arrival of the Turkish Aga, who was daily expected. The French Garrison in Ipres had laid a Design to surprize Warreton, but the Prince of Holstein-Beck having timely Notice of their Intentions, immediately sent a Reinforcement into the Place, and prevented them. Our Letters from France advise, that the Duke of Anjou had order'd General Stanhope to be confin'd to the Castle of Pampeluna, upon a Suspicion that a secret Correspondence was carried on between that General and some of the Spanish Grandees. These Letters confirm the Accounts we had before received of the Defeat of one of the Enemy's Regiments in Catalonia.
