To-morrow his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant goes towards the Curragh of Kildare to take a view of the Army.

Madrid, July 9. Monsignor Borromeo the Popes Nuncio is some time since departed hence and ere this well advanced on his return for Rome, to take the possession of his employment as Secretary of State to the present Pope: Monsignor Marescotti, lately Nuncio in Poland is recalled, and may be suddenly expected here to supply the room of Monsignor Borromeo, with the same Character; in the mean time the place is supplied by an Internuncio, Don Antonio Benavides, Commissary General of the Crusada, who has so much gained upon the Queens favour, that she has been pleased as a particular mark of her esteem, to bestow on him a Cross of Diamonds to the value of Nine thousand Crowns.

The Count de Miranda lately Ambassador in this Court from the Prince of Portugal, being returned home to Lisbonne, and having left the affairs of that Crown to the management of Don Gio. de Roxas, Secretary to the Embassy; their Catholick Majesties have thought fit also to recall their Ambassador the Baron de Batteville, who is suddenly expected home, and have made choice of Don Louis de Villareal to be sent thither with the Character only as Resident.

Monsieur de Gourville Envoy from the Prince of Conde continues still in this Court, soliciting for the payment of a considerable sum of moneys, which he pretends to be due to the said Prince his Master from this Crown, and hopes to have a good Issue of his Negotiation, and to procure assignments upon the moneys which have been brought into the Exchequer, upon the late return of the Gallions.

Vienna, July 13. The Jews have offered great sums of Money to the Emperor, to dispence with his Order for their banishment, or at least to give leave that a considerable number of them may be permitted to continue here, but have effected nothing, and are consequently preparing to be gone within the time prescribed, having already taken care to remove their Synagogue.

The Imperial Army has passed the River Tibisca, whereupon the Turkish Bassas seem to concern themselves, ordering the reinforcement of their Garrisons, and putting themselves into a posture to make opposition if any attempts should be made upon their Quarters, pretending that this over-neer approach of the Emperors Army is inconsistent with the Treaty of peace which was last made between the two Emperors, for which tis supposed, the pressing necessity by reason of these late unexpected disturbances will be a sufficient Apology.

The Letters which the Duke Abaffs, Prince of Transylvania sent lately by a Courier to his Imperial Majesty, are filled principally with Compliments assuring the Emperor of his Fidelity and Inclinations to do him service, but conclude with his desires, that he would please to give his general pardon not only to such persons as are retired into the Fort of Gizet, but to all the rest of the people of Hungary who have been drawn into this late rebellion; with which his desire the Emperor has readily complied, and has dispatcht a Courier into Hungary with a general Amnesty and Act of Oblivion, which tis hoped will have the wished effect, in reducing them all to obedience.

In the mean time they write from Upper Hungary, that the Prince of Holstein, and General Spankau, drawing up close to the said Fort of Gizet, wherein were above an hundred Gentlemen and about 1200 soldiers, the Garrison gave them a warm entertainment with their Canon, killing many of their men, and dismounted the two before-named Officers, but afterwards making a signal for a Treaty the said Generals sent in their Commissioners, with whom an agreement was presently made for the surrender of that place to the Emperors forces, as soon as they could be satisfy'd of the Princess Ragotskys pleasure; farther capitulating, that no hostilities might pass in the mean while from either part.

They farther tell us, that the Regiment of Hofse under the Command of Colonel Dixxwald, was sent away from the Army to Convey the Provisions and Ammunition designed to them, and to secure their passage against the Hungarian Robbers, who (it seems) are very numerous. It has been thought fit to divide the Army and to send one part thereof to Quarter upon the frontiers of Poland. This day a Spanish soldier having without the Gates of this City killed a Country-man who refused to part with his Rors which he was bringing hither to market, a considerable number of the Country people came together with Arms, and marched up to the Spanish Corps de Gard to revenge his death; whereupon the Spaniards retired into the Town, leaving Count Martin with several other Officers to interpose, who after some difficulty persuaded the people to return home, giving them leave to kill the first Spaniard that should for the future offer to rob any of their Gardens.
