Richard Stoughton, Author of the great Cordial-Elixir, for the better accommodating Merchants, Foreigners, Captains of Ships and others, who send or take with them great Quantities abroad, is removed out of Southwark to his House in Bartholomew-lane near the Royal Exchange, London, where the said Elixir is now only prepared, and to which Place all his Correspondents are desired for the future to direct their Letters, and they shall be supplied as formerly. It is Sold at many Places in and about London; also by some one Merchant, Bookseller, Shopkeeper, or Coffeeman in most Cities and great Trading Towns in Europe; where it is not yet placed, any Person who sends first may have it to sell again, with good Allowance, many selling 50 or 60 Dozen a Year, but none will be deliver'd without ready Money, either by Carrier, or by Bill on some one in Town. It is now famous in most Parts of the World, and he hath obtain'd her Majesty's most gracious Letters Patents, for the sole preparing and vending the same, prohibiting all others from making, selling, or in any wise imitating of it. Most Gentlemen drink it in Wine instead of any other Butter, Ladies in Tea and others in Beer, Ale, Cyder, small Punch, &c. Very few travel long Journeys or go to Sea without it, it powerfully preserving from infectious Air, or contagious Diseases, &c. keeping the Body in a due state of Health and Vigour; as the Bills with it direct, being now in French and Dutch as well as English.
