Newcastle, May 11.

THe last night above 100 laden Colliers set sail out of this Port with a good Convoy, which opportunity, we suppose the Fleet of 80 sail at Sunderland hath likewise taken. The Countrey hereabouts not a little rejoycing at the security of their Trade.

Weymouth, May 12. On the tenth instant came in here the Nonsuch Ketch, who had been convoying some Merchants for Guernsey: Upon the Coast of France, near St. Maloes, he met with a French Vessel of six Guns, and 40 Men, with whom he had a very long dispute, insomuch, that between them there was fired near 150 Guns; but the wind not serving the Ketch, the Frenchman got away, and recovered St. Maloes. He tells us, that the Richmond hath carried into Guernsey seven prizes, most of them laden with French Wines, and that the Hawc-at-all, a Privateer for Pool, hath carried into the same place five prizes more, the most part French Wines. Mallines, May 14. Letters from Mayence tells, that two Deputies are going thence for Swedeland, one of them a Nephew to the Prince Elector, the other Monsieur de Trucses, Grand Veneur: There are great hopes of a peaceable determination of the differences, without the tedious expectation of an Arbitration, which we are the more inclined to believe, because the two Princes concerned in the Compromise, are earnest in it, though the Sieur de Risincourt arrived there from Nancy two days since, sent by his Master, the Duke of Lorraine, to tell the Elector that he had several good and stout Troops under his command, which he should be ready to employ in his service, in case that his Highness the Elector Palatine should not be brought to end the business peaceably, which has much dissatisfied Monsieur Habcas, who was that day gone from that Court to Heidelburgh.

On Tuesday last the Deputies from Mayence and the Palatine, had another Meeting at Worms, to compose (if possible) the particular differences arising between the parties about several points relating to the Civil and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction; in which, the Swedish Resident labors much to reconcile them; and gives us hopes, that things will be brought to a good and speedy issue. In the interim, the Lorraine forces are quartered in the Neighborhood, especially upon the Nobility, who are much interested in this affair, and at great expence; and are many of them of opinion, that 'tis better to suffer some inconveniences with Peace, then to go to the destructive trial of a War.

The Elector of Mayence intends suddenly to remove his Court to Wurtzburg.

Venice, April 30. The Welcome and Concord are departed this Port, both laden with Bisket and Soldiers for Zante, carrying with them the Provedor Constantine Loredano. The Welcome intending to lade there for London; the Concord as soon as discharged, goes directly from Zante to Gallipolis, to lade Oyls for London.

The King has ordered that the Companies in each Regiment shall be enlarged to 80 men a piece; and 'tis said, that he intends suddenly in person for Rochel, to see his fleet, which is to come about thither; on which, he intends to embarque 5 or 6000 men, besides those already taken in at Provence.

The last week the Lieutenant Civile of this City, by a Letter of Cuckette from the King, took with him Two Commissaries, with a party of the City Guard, or Archers, and searched an house at the far end of the Fauxbourgs St. Antoine, to which, the Jansenists used to resort, where they found five of that party, with a great number of Manuscripts and Books of that kind of Controverse. The persons taken there, were that day under examination, and are since under custody till further order. Colonel Molendine having had order to keep his Company in arms during the search.

The Princess de Monaco being informed, that the Count de Bussy was fallen dangerous sick at the Basilic, Petitioned the King for his enlargement, but was refused in her suit.

Amsterdam, May 13. The Princess Dowager goes the 22 instant for Cleves, leaving the Prince of Orange his house not yet established, which is a business will require time, the States being content at present with the change of some of the Principal Officers, without making any further alteration. Monsieur de Pradel, General of the French Auxiliaries, arrived here yesterday, having been lately at the Hague. Here is also Monsieur Colbert, the Count de Marsan, and Monsieur Cartier, Intendant to those forces, where they have received order for their speedy march.

Rome, May 1. The last new Cardinals according to custom, gave an account of their promotion to the chief of the Roman Catholick Princes, and amongst the rest, to the French King, and his chief Ministers of State, and particularly to the Duke de Crequi, and Monsieur de Lyonne. The King and Monsieur de Lyonne, returned their Answers in French, the Duke his in Italian; giving them the title of Eminentissimo, without the addition of Patron Clementissimo, which they expected as their due, and esteem their Honors so much wounded by this omission, or design'd neglect, that they are all resolved not to answer his Letter, as of custom they are to doe the rest.

The Vice Roy of Naples hath caused a view to be made of his new Levies for Spain, which exceed not a thousand men, and commanded them upon pain of death, to declare really what Country-men they are, and finding a great number of them that had listed themselves for Burgunions and Lorrainers, upon enquiry to prove French, he immediately cashiered them the service.
