Venice, Sept. 6. A Letter from Zant of the 29th of July confirms the taking of Napoli di Romania by Storm; and relates that the Turk had since besieged the Castle of Patrasso. This Letter says, that in the taking of Napoli di Romania, after the Turks had in the first heat of Action put many to the Sword, they made the rest Captives; but the Grand Visier causing those Captives to be produced, gave for them 15 or 20 Crowns a head to the Soldiers who had taken them, and then caused them to be butchered before him in cold Blood. General Zaeco was kept alive, and 'twas said that General Bon was sent on board the Captain Bashaw. A new Man of War of 54 Guns has been launched out of the Arsenal here, and is called the Venetia Triomphante. A French Ship which took on board the Bailo Memo at Constantinople is arrived here, with some of his Servants and Baggage, having left his Excellency at Corfu. A British Ship called the Duke of Gratton is come in from Canea; with an Account that the Turks have besieged Suda and Spina Longa, the only two Places which the Venetians have left in the Island of Candia. The last Advices from our Fleet, are of the third part from Zant, where it had been joined on the 11th by 4 of our new Men of War, which had been sent from hence as fast as they were fitted out, with the Transports under their respective Comms. The Fleet after having received that Reinforcement, consisted of eighteen Ships of the Line, 2 Fire-ships, and 22 Gallies besides the 4 which were left in the height of Lepanto to hinder the Turkish Gallies from passing towards the Morea. Another quadron of Gallies is left under the Command of Signior Pisci General of the Islands. The Captain-General Signior Delmo had caused the Sick to be set ashore, and supplied their Room with other Soldiers and Seamen; and having called together all the Captains who serve under him, he declared to them that he was determined to engage the Turkish Fleet, exhorting every one to do his Duty, according to the Example which he hoped he should set them: He had hoisted his Flag on Board the Terrour, and had given the Command of all the Gallies to the General of these of Malta; he proposed to sail the 4th or 5th, and to take his Station at Sapienza.

Ratisbon, September 16. Letters of the 11th Instant from Segedin, say the last Advices from Belgrade were full of the Joy and Confidence of the Turks on their late Successes in the Morea. That Garrison had again been reinforced with 1500 Janissaries, and several Vessels were come with Ammunition for their Magazines; those which lay at Vipallantea had been unladen, and the Ammunition sent to Temisvaer; and 28 others with Ammunition and Provisions were gone up the Save to Bosnia. The Turks gave out, that they expected 5 Bashaws to winter at Belgrade, three at Temisvaer, and several others on the Save. They used very great Cruelties to the Inhabitants of Bosnia, where they have about 30000 Men, and had made themselves Masters of Gabella a Fortress in Dalmatia. On the 12th in the Evening, General Virmond passed thro' this Place in his way
