

On the 9th in the Night Count Sponeck came with 500 Men to the Shore over against that Island, having ordered Captain Walter Janfen with some armed Vessels to repair the same. In the Night the Count raised a Battery to be raised, and at Day break commanded Captain Janfen to go with some of his Vessels near the said Island. Hereupon the Swedes came off with several Gallies and Shallops, to attack the Danish Vessels, which retiring, as they had been directed, under the Cannon of the Battery, the Swedes pursued them close with three Gallies, four double Shallops, and other lesser Boats. Then the Count de Sponeck caused his Men to appear, and a terrible Fire of great and small Shot being made upon the Swedes, two of their Gallies were sunk and two of their Shallops. The Danes had likewise placed Cannon in a Pratime, which being towed by some Gallies, had dismounted the Cannon of three or four Batteries which the Swedes had raised on their side of the Bay, and on the said Island; and the 10th at Night Count Sponeck had ordered his Men to take Post on that Island, and dislodge the Swedes.
