

had passed there without any sick; and that on the 10th six fell ill, and one died. M. d'Orsay in his Letter of the 16th of August, says he had an Account from M. de Joffeau, that the Quarantain was carefully observed at Avignon; that in five or six Days there had but seven or eight fallen ill; and that the Inhabitants of Monteux were unwilling to put themselves under Quarantain, but he would compel them to do it. The Son of a Man who died of the Contagion in a Barn within the Territory of Orange, fell sick the 3d of August, but his Distemper was judged not to be dangerous. Preparations were making for a General Disinfection.
