Barnstable, June 8.

THe Irish Fleet is lately returned without any accident by the way: The Dutch Caper and a French Merchant now lately taken on the French Coasts, and brought into Milford, were from thence ordered for Bristol, but by contrary winds were forced to put into Milford Cove.

Milford, June 8. The Fleet from Ireland of 38 Vessels laden with Cattle, passed lately by the mouth of this Harbour, and two ships with Virginia Whimsie touched here, and went off again, purchasing their courses.

Bridlington, June 11. On Sunday night last there appeared on this Coast, a Holland Man of War, of about twenty Guns, but we heard not of any thing he has done, only yesterday a Hoy belonging to Whitby was taken by him, who still continues riding to the Northwards of Flamborough head.

Plymouth, June 12. This day the Elizabeth, and the Gites Keich, set sail for the Gunn-Fleet, having under their Convoy two Tinn ships, two Vishwallers for the Fleet; and several Merchantsmen: four Swedes ships went off this day for Lisbone, three of them laden with Deales, and Spars, the other unladen here.

Madrid, June 3. After a tedious Journey from the Groyne in Gallicia, the Lord Ambassador, the Earl of Sandwich, with his Train, are all safe arrived at Madrid the 28 of May, being met at El Pardo one of the Kings Houses, within two Leagues of Madrid, by the Master of the Ceremonies, with three of the Queens Coaches; and the same night brought into a very good House, provided and well furnished for the Ambassador himself; and another close by for the Gentlemen of his Retinue, wanting for no accommodations: being nobly treated by the way, especially at Ashburg in Leon; and at Valladolid in Castilla, where he was diverted by a Comedy provided purposely for him: He is now entertained upon the Queens charge, the Council allowing 70000 Rials for 10 daies expence, which is about 87 l. Sterling.

Letters from Cadix of May 23. Tell us that the Duke de Beaufort arrived there on the Tuesday before, with his Fleet, and put again to Sea on the 23, and in said, were bound for Lisbone: That before their departure, there arose a quarrel between some of the French, and the Cadix Boat-men, about the price of Muskrell, which the French would have had at their own rates; both parties growing high upon the dispute, they fell afterwards to blows, and above 2000 Swedes drawn upon the shore; but in the end, the French were beaten off, and forced into the Sea, leaving 100 or twelve of their company dead behind them; the Spaniards looting only two. This, and several other stories frequently brought thence of the French insolencies, extremely disgust the people of this place; who are not a little troubled also at a report of French Men and Provisions sent to the assistance of Portugal.

Bruges, June 19. The follys and falsehoods dispersed concerning the late Engagement at Sea, are pretty well vanished; and now we have every way true light given from all hands, that the Victory was on the English side; it being generally confessed, that of all the great body of ships that were engaged against the English, there are returned upon the Wyl before Flushing but 51, before Kamperius 9, and 7 to the Neuss; so that upon the most modest account, they want at least 30 of their ships; which being observed to the Royalty at his return, he said he was vnder much at it, for that he knew but of four or five sunk and burnt. An Express sent aboard their Fleet from hence to view them at their return, found them extremely torn and shattered, above forty dead in the ship, on which he went aboard: In passing by Stags they shot not off a Gun, and he observed but one Flag amongst them all, their custom, it seems, being for every ship that has lost her Captain, to take down her Flag at her coming in.

The last Letters from Zeland confess their retreat, for so they would have it called, which they are willing not to attribute to the English but to a Fogg; and that Kuyperen, the Admiral of Zeland is sunk with his ship, and that Tromp lost three ships one after another, and that they yet miss above 300 of their Fleet.

The Ruyters Letter to the States, after the two full days Engagement, confesses their great odds in number, and speaks very advantageously of the English courage and bravery; and all mens mouths are full of the two English Generals praises, whom they extremely admire in all that action, and acknowledge that the Princes coming in so opportunely, wholly changed the fortune of the battle.

In fine, when they had cast up their accounts at the Hague, and after their own Arithmetics, it was yet ingenuously resolved upon the question, That there should be no Bonifac made.

The Marquis de la Fayette, a French Reformed in this Engagement, confesses he was three days in the cruellest fight that ever was; that a new Squadron of the English coming in, they gave all for lost, and so, he with some few Mariners got off in a Sloop, with very great hazard, and some toll, which he confesses was yet very well bestowed.

In fine, this Victory has much weakened the Dutch, but infinitely wrought upon their mindes, and taught them, that no advantage of number or circumstances can secure them a Victory in the issue.

Stockholm, May 6. We continue here to pursue our Naval preparations with all diligence imaginable; and towards the latter end of this month, a considerable Fleet will be ready to go to the Sound, there to watch the motion of the Danes. Of this Fleet see the Ships following.

These are besides these, yet five other great Ships to be made ready to go in company with some nine or ten smaller ones towards the Sound, as there shall hereafter be occasion.

Hague, June 15. The States reflecting upon the several passages in the late Engagement, attribute the want of their desired success, amongst other things, to divers Captains of great ships, that under several pretences quitted the Sea, before the end of the fight; and have written a Letter to the Deputies at Melvoer-stays, seeming much to wonder the contrary to an express command, the greatest ships left that fight to being home prizes, leaving the weaker engaged, when it was before ordered to sink all that should be taken, meaning Reto-Admiral de Swaver that had blockt in the Wisse-fare.

They are now wholly intent upon the setting out again to Sea, the Here Waeren being ordered to repair to the Fleet, and report to them the true state and condition of it. De Witte and Amerongen ordered to use their endeavors with the Danish Envoyé; that the eight ships equipped for his Master, may be now employed for the necessity of the States, and be added to the Fleet, about which, they are likewise to consult with Admiral Adelaer; as also, that the five remaining ships of the 13 to be furnished to Denmark, be manned and sent out to the Fleet, if it be still at Sea, and that Drums be beaten up for men, and the Admiralty to use their endeavor in this conjuncture.

The Admiralties are likewise ordered to send their Deputies to Wielingen, where de Witte and others are to appear, in case the Fleet come in thither, to give all necessary orders upon all emergencies: And Amerongen to go to the Texel to hasten out all the ships that lie there.

The States have also ordered a Letter to be written to de Ruyter, giving him thanks for his conduct in the late Engagement, signifying their pleasure, that for security of these Countreys, the most part of the Fleet keep the Sea, promising their care to send them new Ships and Men, with Sails, Masts, and all other necessaries for the reparations of their Ships.

Vienna, June 5. His Imperial Majesty is preparing for the Reception of the Empress, who is expected about the 10 of July, and the Duke Dietrichstein ordered speedily for Milan to attend her as her chief Marshal; and several Regiments ordered to attend her, for the security of her Voyage.

From Hungary we are informed of a great controversy risen between Ragotski and Abassi, the latter erecting a Sconce in upper Hungary, which Ragotski endeavors to oppose; and 'tis feared will occasion great disturbances in those parts. Great complaints are made of Balassi Imbre, in the Hungarian Palatinate, by reason of the insufferable insolency of his Soldiers.

Several designs are here on foot for the advancing of trade, by the setting up a Company of Merchants to trade by the Danubius, to Constantinople and Asia, &c. as likewise for the making of all sorts of Commodities as are usually brought hither from France, whereby great sums of money are carried out of this Country.

The Elector of Brandenbourg hath put a Garrison of 1500 Men into Magdenburg, the City Keys being delivered up to Colonel Smidtz; and all the Town soldiers discharged, and the neighbourhood full of soldiers, which are to continue till they have sworn fidelity to the Elector, who is expected there in 14 daies with 2000 horse.

Legorn, June 7. By a Vessel arrived in nine days from Algiers, we have a second confirmation of the Peace said to be concluded by the French, with those of Algiers, exempting their ships from visiting and search, and determining the price of the French Slaves, viz. those taken at Gigery to be redeemable at 215 pieces of Eight each, the rest at the price first paid in the Market. The rest of the points of this Peace, are said to be mostly the same with that made with the English. To which, they of Algiers are said to have been necessitated by the unprosperousness of their Armes against the Inland Moors, who it seems at present give them much trouble. A fuller account of this you may expect by the next.

Normich, June 13. This City still continues Visited with the Plague; The Bill of Mortality running thus. The Total of all the Burials 28. Of the Plague 18. At the Pesthouse 4.

An Advertisement.

Being daily prest to the Publication of Books, Medicines, and other things, not properly the business of a Paper of Intelligence. This is to notify once for all, that we will not charge the Gazette with Advertisements, unless they be matter of state; but that a Paper of Advertisements will be forthwith Printed apart, and recommended to the Publick by another hand.

Hague, June 22. We have hitherto talked of 14 ships taken, and eighteen sunk and burnt; but upon the last calculation, we finde but six or seven in all taken: And for those that are sunk, we have no other proofs then a bare report for it.

The Danes insist now to have rather money then ships, and therefore some of us think it were better the 13 ships were sent them as they are, and other snift made to recruit our own Fleet.

Great debate hath been about the manner of our intended Thanksgiving, most were for onely ringing the Bells, and no Bonafires; but Holland said plainly they would have Bonafires, though they were single in the thing: So as we hope we shall have Bonafires when all is done.

Upon debate of the Letter to be writ to Isbrandts, and the Minute brought in by those of Holland, 'twas flat and plain to refuse the Rescission of the Treaty of Elbing; but Zealand hath laid it aside.

We are yet embroiled in the matter of Oostfrizee, and we are thinking how to get out of it, without bringing things to too desperate an issue. The Envoyé of Embden hath had Audience upon it, and concludes in our sense, to have the Lunenburgs forces summoned to quit the Countrey.

The French Troops under Pradel, passed by Maastricht on Whitsunday, and in order good enough.

No perfect resolution as yet taken, concerning the eight ships prepared for Denmark.

Sir George Ayscough was at last ordered to the Castle of Lowestein, and accordingly is transported thither, under the Guard of a party of Horse.

Upon second thoughts, de Ruyter talks much more calmly of our Victory, and indeed leaves the matter but doubtful, confessing in a manner, they left the English last at Sea.

An English Gentleman, one Mr. Bromelcy, belonging to the Prince of Orange, hath been lately secured, under pretence of holding correspondence with the enemies of the State; and is said, is ordered to quit the States Territories in three days.

Since my last, we finde among our losses, that of the Rere-Admiral Stackhoven, Rere-Admiral of North Holland, his ship being the Arms of Enckhusen of 72 Guns. In Vice-Admiral Swaers ship of 46 men left alive, were onely six found sound, the rest dangerously wounded: And some other new discoveries of this kinde, allay much our first belief of the Victory, and we begin to doubt what it will at last end in.

Legorn, June 8. It is here reported, that an Hamburgher is sighted at Marsilles, and is to bring with him the moneys that are to be paid for the French Slaves at Tunis, and has orders to carry them to their Fleet, which is in great want of men.

Letters likewise from Messina advise us, that eight of our English Merchants are departed homewards; one of them from Scanderoon, the rest laden with Oyl, Currants, and Bimstone.

Deal, June 16. On Thursday last, the Norwich, Cap. Robert Worden Commander, brought in a Vessel of 50 Tuns, laden with Hides and Tallow; and another Vessel yesterday of 100 Tuns, laden with White-wine and Brandy, both in the Hold, between Decks, and in the great Cabbin; which are sent up to the Commissioners for prizes at London.

Whitehal, June 16. The 14 instant arrived Comte Philibert de Piozasque, Envoyé from the Duke of Savoie, to complement their Majesties, and Royal Highnesses, upon the Birth of the young Son of that Duke; and the next day was admitted to Audience by their Majesties accordingly, having been introduced by the Master of the Ceremonies in the usual manner.

This Morning His Majesty accompanied with his Royal Highnesses; and attended by several of his Ministers of State, and other principal persons of Quality, is gone towards the Fleet at the Buoy in the Nore, to hasten thir speedy putting to Sea; in prosecution of their late happy Victory, which it is not doubted but they will be in a condition in a few daies, to improve much more considerably upon our Enemies, who tell us, they will in ten daies give us the opportunity, having given order for a Fleet of fifty sail, forthwith to put out to Sea, composed of the thirteen intended for Denmark, the rest to be made up out of the soundest of those that returned from the last Engagement.
