From Upper Hungary they write, that they justly apprehended the Turks would give them some disturbance this Summer, and desire provision may be therefore made for their defence.

Dantzick, Feb. 20. Our last Letters from Warsaw tell us, that the great Chancellour of Lithuania had given into the Dyet several Complaints against the Bishop of Culme, Vice Chancellour of the Kingdom, which had for some days wholly interrupted the other debates of the Dyet, the Members being divided in their opinion, concerning their proceeding in this affair, many being of opinion, that the said Vice Chancellour should be immediately sent for, he being at present at his Diocess, to answer to what had been exhibited against him, though others urged, to have the whole matter deterred till some other more seasonable time, which at the desire of the King, and the interposition of the Senate, they accordingly resolved it should, and that this Session they would enter upon no other business, but that for the raising of Men and Money for the security of the Kingdom.

Here hath been this week a report in Town, that the greatest part of the Polish Army growing daily more and more discontented, by reason of the want of their arrears, and the many hardships they suffer in their winter quarters, had confederated against the Crown, having made choice of one Samosh for their General, a person who is known to be highly dissatisfied with the present Government, because as he pretends, he hath not been able to obtain any satisfaction in his pretence upon the Town of Samosh, which is now in the possession of the Kings Mother, as of right belonging to her; but it is hoped, that this is only a report, and that the Dyet now assembled, will take speedy care for the satisfying the Army, to prevent such disorders.

The Roads about Warsaw have been lately very much infested by some Polish Gentlemen, who have committed several Murthers and Robberies, two of the chiefest of them have been taken Prisoners, and according to the Sentence of the Dyet, beheaded at Warsaw, which it is hoped, may discourage the others from continuing in these bad courses.

* The French Soldiers being part of them removed out of Bon, Nuis, Keyserwaert, and Kempen, into the Neighbouring Villages, seem to live at much more ease, and not so subject to distempers as before. We hear nothing farther of the Duke of Lorraine's accommodation with his most Christian Majesty, though it is certainly said, that the Sieur Canon, isitating concerning it at the French Court.

The Duke de Bourbonville, hath been by his Excellencies order at Louvain, to visit that place, and to see what may be done for the present strengthening of it. Our Fortifications here go on apace, and at Mons the Duke d' Arschot omits no diligence, for the perfecting the works there, for which, all the Inhabitants with great readiness contribute their endeavors, so that in a short time they hope to make that place almost impregnable.

The Deputies from the States General of the United Provinces are still here, and in frequent conference with his Excellency, and other principal persons of this Court. His Excellency hath made several new Propositions to the States of Brabant, for the borrowing a summe of Money of them, though as yet, we hear not of any thing they have done in it.

The Countess of Monterey, after having been reduced to that weakness, that we had almost despaired of her recovery, is at present much better, her Fever beginning to leave her, to the great joy of his Excellency and the whole Court.
