Fontainebleau, October 5, N. S.

ON the 1st Instant the Life-Guards commanded by the Duke de Villeroi at Fontainebleau, were relieved after three Months Service by those of the Duke d'Harcourt. Yesterday, the 4th, her most Christian Majesty went to Paris, and visited the Churches of Notre Dame and St. Genevieve. Her Majesty is expected here on Thursday next. The Duke of Bourbonville is ill at Paris, of a Fever and a Diarrhea. The last Letters from Spain advise, that the Duke of Ripperda, after having left Segovia, stopt three or four Days at a Village five Leagues distant from thence, till a Servant Maid and a Corporal, the Abettors of his Escape, came to him. He had with him a Servant of his own, who came from Madrid with Arms, Money, and one of the Mules of his Lady's Coach; but he chose the Conveniency of one of the flow Voitures used in Spain, which make about eight Leagues a Day, and so travelled to Miranda de Duero in Portugal, and from thence as was supposed he went to Oporto. He passed Miranda the 8th of September, since which there has been no Account of him. The Man that conducted him would not carry him beyond Miranda, having contracted to go no further than to that Place, and it was not till the Return of that Person with his Voiture that there was any certain Advice what Way the Duke of Ripperda had taken.
