Whitehall, March 19.

Yesterday the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, waited on his Majesty at St. James's with the following humble Address, being introduced by his Grace the Duke of Grafton, Lord Chamberlain.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons, of the City of London, in Common Council assembled.

May it please Your Majesty,

WE the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council assembled, most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on the happy Conclusion of the Marriage of the Princess Royal with his most Serene Highness the Prince of Orange.

Our Minds preface the greatest Glory, the brightest Triumphs, and the most distinguished Prosperity to these Nations, both in the present and future Ages, from another Alliance with that truly Illustrious House, the House of Nassau, from whence so many Heroes have sprung, the Scourges of Tyrants, and the Assertors of Liberty.

Among these we must for ever remember that glorious Prince King William the Third, who delivered these Kingdoms from the imminent Dangers of Popery and Arbitrary Power; and, during the Course of his important Reign, established the Constitution, and secured our Liberties in such a Manner, that he seems to have left nothing more to be done, than what we hope was reserved to compleat the Glories of your Majesty's Reign: A Reign in which we justly promise ourselves, that nothing will be omitted which may appear necessary for the confirming our ancient Constitution; for easing the People from those heavy Burthens, which the Defence of their Liberties induced them to impose on themselves; for encouraging the Trade and advancing the Maritime Power of this Kingdom; for making us happy at Home, and respected Abroad.

And as we have a grateful Sense of the many Blessings we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious Reign, we beg Leave to assure your Majesty of our hearty Endeavours in our Sphere to promote an affectionate Zeal for your Majesty's Person and Government; that your Reign may be easy and happy.

JACKSON.

To which His Majesty was pleased to give the following most gracious Answer.

My Lord Mayor and Gentlemen,

I Return you my Thanks for this dutiful and loyal Address, and am very glad that the Marriage of my Daughter with the Prince of Orange gives such general Satisfaction.

It is a great Pleasure to me to see this Metropolis remember with so much Gratitude, the Deliverance of these Kingdoms from Popery and Slavery, by my great Predecessor King William.

A just Sense of the imminent Dangers that this Nation then escaped, and of the inestimable Blessings that we now enjoy, will best secure to my People the Continuance and Preservation of our present Happiness, which it has been, and always shall be my Care to support and maintain to the utmost of my Power.

Then they waited upon Her Majesty, being introduced by the Right Honourable the Earl of Grantham, Her Majesty's Lord Chamberlain; and Mr. Baron Thomson, the Recorder, made their Compliments in the following Speech.

May it please your Majesty,

THE Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, most humbly beg Leave to congratulate your Majesty on the Marriage of her Highness the Princess Royal to his Serene Highness the Prince of Orange.

As you, Madam, gave Birth to this amiable Princess, and had the forming of her excellent Mind, and adorned her with all those Accomplishments which make her so justly and universally admired, To your Majesty will be owing, not only the Happiness of the Prince her Consort, but the Effects of your Majesty's Cares, Wisdom and Goodness, will be extended for the Welfare of all those Countries, where ever her Royal Highness shall have any Influence.

And
