

giving an account of the arrival of 2 more men of war from the Texel, which render'd our Fleet 89 men of War compleat, 13 Fire-ships, besides Advice-Yachts, &c. So as he now wanted nothing but the appearance of an Enemy to make us a second time Victorious.

Two more new ships are ready at Rotterdam to have join'd the Fleet, but the Soldiers that were to serve on them, unsatisfied with their ill treatment, and wanting their pay due to them, refused to go; so as the Vessels have been forced to remain there. Orders are given to the respective Admiralties forthwith to Re-victual the Fleet for three Months, accounting from the last of August.

The four new ships fitting out in Zealand, will want Cannon, which they of Holland offer to furnish them, but at the Market price; so as they are never the near. In North-Holland are three others, which for want of money, are like to lie there, that Admiralty having sent hither to be furnished with some.

From Clandert come complaints of fresh Inroads made into the Countrey about Breda, by persons that shelter themselves in Brabant, which revives our jealousies of the Spanish Governor. And it is resolv'd, Letters of Reprizal shall be granted against the Catholick Kings Subjects in the Merchants case, whose children have been the ten or twelve years detained in Hajnult; and already our Governors of Stuys and Zus have orders to take in reparation some Churchmen of that Countrey.

The Princes business, as also those other of Friesland, of the Subsidies for Luxemburg, and indeed every thing else of importance is laid by, till we see the issue of the next battle. In the mean time, the Sickness spreads in many parts of this Countrey, and increases much even in this Town.

Malaga, July 16. Three Turks Men of War from Argiers, met lately with an Hollander of 36 Guns, laden with Corn in the Streights mouth; and after some dispute sunk her, but preserved 52 of her Men: The Turks looting near 50 in the fight, went afterwards into Tangier to repair. The King of Tassafeta continues Victorious, and 'tis said is in the Field with an Army of one hundred Thousand Men, and hath beaten Benbacher, and that Tytuan is by this in his possession.

Legorn, July 19. The four General ships belonging to the Turkish company, are now coming in hither, who intend to discharge their fine goods; with them came likewise the Robert a rich ship from Scanderoon. We are advis'd that ten French Gallies have taken in good store of Powder and Bullet, and intend immediately for those parts, to attend the motion of the English ships.

Alborough, July 28. The Master of a Vessel sent out the 25th Instant, to discover the place and posture of the Fleets, returned the 27th about Noon with this Account, That on Thursday morning he discovered two parties of ships, the one proving our Blew Squadron, that lay with their Sails hall'd up, the other, the Dutch in the Rear, with about 30 ships (being strengthened (as it appeared) by the addition of 7 or 8 ships, that upon pursuit of the other Squadrons were cut off by the Generals from the Body of their Fleet) they had then the advantage of the Weather-gage, but made no attempt to Engage, though then much superiour in number, ours not being above 22 Sail. About twelve, the wind proving more Northerly, the Dutch tack't, and stood away to the Eastward, ours mending their Sails and Rigging (that had been the day before somewhat disordered) stood immediately after them, pursuing with all the Sail they could make.

In the Evening 6 or 7 more, of ours came in, and a little before them the Rear-Admiral of the Red, with his Main-topmast by the board, with two other Fregats, one of them the Revenge, the other he knows not, but both of them in good condition; the Rear-Admiral fitting himself with a Topmast, got says to yard, and with the Blew Squadron, were in pursuit within two miles distance of the Zealanders, having got also the weather-gage of them, it was then seven in the Evening.

On Thursday the Breda came disabled into this Road, Captain Saunders Commandet, hurt in the Leg with a small shot, his Lieutenant wounded, the Master killed. They think, they have lost about 100 men, and about 1000 muniti- on shore.

The same night came into this Bay the East-India London, the Captain killed, and buried here on shore: The ship not much disabled, but onely they want Seamen. Their Chirurgeon wounded in the Arm by a 24 pound Bullet, with his assistant.

Whitehall, July 29. This morning at four a clock arrived here Sir Thomas Clifford, who suitable to his indefatigable zeal in all parts of His Majesties service, hath been all along a constant sharer in the honorable hazards of this War, bringing Letters to His Majesty from his Highness Prince Rupert, and his Grace the Lord Duke of Albemarle, dated the 27th instant, three leagues off the Island Scamou, containing as full a Relation of the other part of the late Happy Victory as was then come to their knowledge; of which you will have elsewhere the Particulars, and must hereafter expect the rest, as we can in time learn them.

In the general it contains a most perfect Victory over as much of the Enemies courage as they thought fit to show, and the world may in it take a just measure of the English and Dutch Valor, never having strengths been more evenly paired, nor ever a clearer conviction of the vain and insolent brags of that people. Their grois with de Ruyster stood our Red and White Squadrons about five hours, from ten till three on Wednesday the 25; and then without any reason, but want of better courage, bore clear away, ours pursuing the rest of that day with all the sail we could make, in that little wind that was stirring, pelting them till dark night. The next morning ours made up to them again all they could, forcing them into the very shore of Zealand, West-Cabel Steeple bearing E. and by N. Our small Fregats pressed upon them within two miles of the shore, and our biggest ships into six fathom water. The enemy so cowed, that they durst not make the least head, in-somuch, that Thursday morning being very calm, and the enemy to windward of us, the Fanjan, a small new Sloop of two Guns, built the other day at Harwich, made up with his Oars towards them, and drawing both his Guns on one side, very formally attacqued de Ruysters ship; and continued this honorable fight so long, till she had received two or three shots from him, between wind and water, to the great laughter and delight of our Fleet, and the indignation and reproach of our enemy.

Besides the damage done their ship in their Men, Hulls and Rigging in the general, two very considerable ones were taken by us, and burnt astewards: One commanded by Adrian Bankert, Vice-admiral of Zealand, of 60 Guns, 250 Men: The other, the Snake of Haerlem, of 66 Guns, and 300 Men. De Ruysters own ship much maimed, and himself supposed to be killed, his Flag having been observed to be struck at least two hours together: And as much is said of Tromp, who, it seems, served in that Squadron which engaged the Blew; the more exact Account of whose success we yet want, more then that after the Wednesdays fight maintained well on both sides, they were forced on Thursday down-right to flee, being pursued by ours till the Night came on, and broke off the Chace. It's confidently said, three of this Squadron of the Enemies ships were fired, of which we must expect further certainty: As also of their more particular damages, and loss of Commanders, Tromp, it's thought, is one, his Flag being observed likewise struck.

Our losses are certainly very inconsiderable, onely the Resolution burnt, the Captain and Men all saved, Captain Seymore in the Firesight killed, and the Captain of the East-India London, who was brought on shoare, and buried at Alborough. Our Generals remain riding with his Majesties Fleet before the Enemies Ports, all well and in a very good condition to watch what further advantages may be made upon them.

In consequence of this happy Victory, publike Thankes were this day returned in the several Churches of the Cities of London and Westminster, and His Majesty received the Complements of the Ambassadors, and publike Ministers residing in his Court, and the day was closed with the usual marks of Publick Joy, the Guns from the Tower, Bells and Bonfires.
