Advertisements.

WHEREAS the Use of common Cartridge-Paper hath been found very dangerous and inconvenient for the loading of Guns on board of Ships, by retaining Sparks of Fire in the Breech of the Gun after the Discharge, and also by rotting with the Damps, unavoidably in Ships at Sea, whereby the Powder kept in them will be spoil'd, and render'd useless as well as dangerous, by their bursting before they can be put into the Gun, to the Hazard of the Ship, its Crew and Cargo. To prevent which there is now invented a Method, for which his Majesty has been graciously pleas'd to grant his Royal Letters Patent, for making and preparing Paper for Cartridges, which will not flame, nor retain any Sparks of Fire, and will likewise resist Moisture and Damps, so that it will not rot or be decay'd thereby; and Gunpowder will be preserv'd in Cartridges made of this Paper always dry and fit for Service, better than in the common Powder Barrels, on which Account it is far preferable to Parchment, or any thing hitherto used for that Purpose. These Advantages of preventing the fatal Accidents attending the Use of common Cartridge-Paper and Parchment, and of preserving Gunpowder from Moists and Damps, must sufficiently recommend the Use of this prepared Paper to all Commanders or Owners of Ships, who may be supply'd with any Quantity of Cartridges made to their Size; to be had only at Simon Vertue's, Stationer, in Sweeting's Alley, Royal Exchange, London. N. B. All Persons who buy for Sale, shall be allowed a reasonable Profit.
