Petersbourg, April 9.

THAT Part of the Russian Army which is to be commanded by Felt-Marshal Count Munich, and which is to consist, some say of 70, and others affirm 90,000 regular Troops, besides a vast Number of Tartars, Cossacks, and Calmucks, is in full March to assemble at Zari-zinka; and it is generally believed here, that the Felt Marshal designs very soon to besiege Oczakow on the Mouth of the River Nieper, to try to engage the Grand Vizier to come to a Battle in order to relieve that Place. All the Ammunition and Provisions for the Army are to be carried down the Nieper by the Boats that have been built this Winter at Bransky. The other Part of the Russian Army, that is to be commanded by Felt-Marshal Lacy, and which is said to consist of 40,000 regular Troops, besides Tartars and Cossacks, is assembling at Issum on the River Donetz, and is to attack the Crimea, at the same time that a great Number of Boats, which have been built this Winter at Taurus on the River Don, are to carry other Troops over the Sea of Asoph, and attack also that Country. Major-General Biron, one of her Czarish Majesty's General Adjutants, and Brother to the Great Chamberlain, set out from hence the 6th Instant in order to join the Army.
