Venice, March 18. Ur Letters from Constantinople tell us, that the Grand Signior continues to reside with his Court at Adrianop'e, leaving the whole management of the affairs of the Empire to the cire of the Grand Vizier, who hath hitherto discharged himself of that Trust, with much Honor, and with the general Applause of the People; his inclination is observed to be much for War, and we are told of great preparations that are at present every where making, as if he had some great design in hand this Spring; many are of opinion, it may be against the Persians, who have of late committed several disorders on the Prontiers; others rather think, he will endeavour to perfivade the Grand Senior to enter into Poland a-gain this Summer, and take the advantage of the diforders of that King om, on pretence that they have not made good the late Treaty in the point of paying the Tribute; but we wust leave it to time to discover the truth of these ciscourses. By several Vessels arrived here we continue to hear of the great mischies the Christian Gatties do daily in the Archipelago, and of the great interruption they give by that means to the Turkish Trade, being of late grown so formidable, that the Captain Bula dares not venture to Sea with his Gallies. We were here in great fearcity of Fish this Lenr, but feveral Ships comeing lately in,

we are now pretty well supplyed.

Warfam, March, 271. We have little to advise from hence, save of the many differences that daily arise in the Councels of this Kingdom; the Dyet is at present Affembled, though the diffinosities that already appear amongst the Nobility, seem to foretell the little good we are to expect from this Selfion: The Deputies of Lithuania made yesterday a Proposition, that every third Dyer might be held at Eiteath, which those of Poland warmely opposed, to that degree, that it begot some sharp words betwixt them, which the Deputies of Lithusviv stomacht highly, and thereupon left the Dyet, proteiting against the proceedings of it, and have not as verbeen able to be persuaded to come back, so that all debates are at present at a stand; The Dyer being by the constitution of the Kingdom, in a manner dissolved, by any of the Deputies thus absenting themselves.

Zurich, March 21. From the Franche Comte all our advices tell us, that the affairs of that Country were very well fetled again, the Marquis de Listener, the chief Author of the late diforders there, being retired to Dijon: Here are some persons on the part of the Emperor, who make earnest instance to the Cantons, that they would call home such Troops as they have at prefent in the Service of the Crown of France, though hitherto without any effect.

Vienns, Mirch 26. The 24 instant his Imperial Majesty parted from Schonbrun to Newstadt, where he will continue till the 16 of the next Month: The Elector of Saxony hath lately written to the Emperor-complaining of the dumminge his Subjects have fultained by the march of his Troops, and defiring at the same time, that if his Majerty shall for the sucure have occasion to sendany Forces towards the Rhyn, he would order them to much some other way, for that he could not grant them passage through his Country. The Rebels in Hungary continue still in several places in confiderable Bodies, and though they have received often Delears, yet can they not be brought to so low a condition, as to make them wholly to quit the Field. General Montequeuti is daily expected here, who by reason of his Indisposition, travails very slowly; Our Army we hear draws daily up higher into the Empire, leaving the French absolute Masters of the Field.

Zell, March 31. The Imperial and Brandenburgh Troops have certainly quitted their Quarters in Highelm, and are, as we are told, marched towards Frankenland; here is much discourse of Monsieur de Turenne's being about passing down the Rhyne again towards Wefel, though in the mean time they are fortifying feveral Paffes on the Rhyne, as particularly Hoxter, where they are likewife repairing the Stone Bridge. It is faid that Monsieur Verjus the French Minister is gone towards the Court of the Elector of Brandenburgh, to speak of some particular Treasy, The Swedes continue their Levies all about Hambrough, and in the Dutchy of Bremen, with much vigor, inteffding to have a confiderable Force on foot, and that fuddainly.

Cologne; arch 31. We are in great expectation to hear what e feet the Conference lately had, between the Bishop of Mansfer, Monsieur de Turenne, Prince Wil-lem of Furstenburgh, and the Duke of Osaphug, thay have; several persons here are of opinion, that the French will draw down again towards Wesel, and that the Consederate Troops will come again towards the Rhsn, but these discourses seem to ber the invention of those that savor the Dutch Lucrett who would even flatter themselves with the Interest, who would even flatter themselves with the hopes of seeing the Consederates very suddainly return into the Field again with a powerful Army; Hitherto. they have been forced to retreat from one place to an other, up on the approach of the French Army, and at present we hear, that upon advice that Monsieur de Turenne was on his march towards Hildesheim, to dislodge them there, they have likewife quitted the quarters they had in that Diocese. From Warendorp we have advice, that the 25 instant marched thence 8000 Foot, and 6000 Horse of the Bishops Troops for Halle, and so for Morder the ing thought that they will proceed to Minden that they will proceed to Minden that they will proceed to Minden that have themselves that error of that flace; they had with them 60 Waggons, laden withall hind of Ammunition and Military Provisions

Hildesheim, April 1. The Imperial Troops are now broke up in order to their quitting this Diocels, intending to take their march through Eichtfeld, Yesterday four Imperial Regiments of Horse had their Quarters at the Ampthuys Wirtzenburgh, to guard the paffage of the Lein, having at the same time caused the Bridge which was over that River to be broken down, that the French and Munster Troops which are at Hoxter might not give them any disturbance. This day, we are told that the Imperialist have altered their march, and instead of passing through Eichtfeld, have resolved to march through the Ampten Walenburgh, Lutten and uintzenburgh, and so forwards towards the Graefshappen of Hogenheym and Manfeld, fothat a day or two we hope will clear us of all these Troops; the occasion of this removal, was the arrival of a box
