Naples, December 22.

THE Council of Commerce lately established here, is vested with great Powers, and especially to decide as Judges all Disputes that may relate to Traffick by Sea or Land. They propose to improve the Manufactures now carried on in this Kingdom, and to set up and encourage others. The great Difficulty will be to induce a People accustomed to Sloth and Idleness, to relish Work, tho' for their better Maintenance. A Society is formed for erecting a Printing-house in this Capital: And they propose to begin by printing Missals, Breviaries, and other Books for the Service of the Church, with which we have hitherto been furnished by Foreigners. They will for the present make Use of Letter cast at Florence.

Modena, Dec. 24, N. S. The Duke our Sovereign holds frequent Councils with his Ministers for well regulating the publick Affairs, and particularly for promoting Commerce. By the Marriage of the Hereditary Prince with the young Dutchess of Massa, the two Dominions being become united, the Duke of Modena and the Regent Dutchess of Massa have agreed, and have already set Men to Work, to make a High-Road in the Mountains which separate the Modenesse from the Dutchy of Massa and Carrara. That Work is suspended at present on Account of the bad Weather, but will be renewed in the Beginning of next Spring. This will be of great Advantage, not only to the Dutchies of Modena and Massa, but to great Part of Italy. For, Goods may be brought up hither by Water from Venice, Trieste, and Fiume, and be carried from hence by Land to Carrara on the Coast of the Mediterranean, whence they may be sent by Shipping to Leghorn, Genoa, Naples, Marfeilles, and other Ports; from which Ports Goods may in like Manner be conveyed by Sea to Carrara, and thence by Land hither, and sent from hence by Water to the Ports in the Adriatick.

Hague, Jan. 15.
