Hanover, June 29, O. S.

HIS Majesty, Sovereign of the most noble Order of the Garter, was pleased this Day to give his Commands to Mr. Anstis, Garter King of Arms, to wait upon his most Serene Highness Prince Frederick of Hesse Cassel, with a Copy of the Statutes of that Order; which his Highness having considered, did, by an Instrument under his Hand and Seal, promise to observe in every Article not contrary to the Religion professed by him, or derogatory to any Rights or Privileges of the Sacred Roman Empire. The Sovereign having appointed the Ceremonies of the Investiture to be performed at Five this Afternoon in the Great Gallery before the Court, there was a Chair of State placed in the Middle of that spacious Room, and near to it a little Table, whereon the Mantle, Hood, and Collar of the Order, with the George appendant to it, were laid. At the Hour appointed the Sovereign seated himself in that Chair, whereof Notice was forthwith sent to his most Serene Highness, who attended in a Room near adjoining with Garter King of Arms habited in his Mantle, and with the other Ensigns of his Office, who immediately thereon took up the Garter and George, both enamelled and set with Diamonds, on a Crimson Velvet Cushion; and upon his Entry into the Great Gallery, made his Obedience to the Sovereign, and again when he had proceeded on about half the Distance towards the Chair of State, and again at the Approach near to it: His Serene Highness followed, making the like Reverences. Then the Marquis de la Forest, Great Chamberlain of Hanover, who stood near to the Chair of State, drew his own Sword by the Sovereign's Command, where-with his Majesty conferred on the Prince, then kneeling, the Honour of Knighthood. Then Garter King of Arms, on his Knee presented the Garter adorned with Diamonds to his Majesty, who put it on the Prince's Left Leg, and which was buckled on by Garter King of Arms, reading the Admonition in this Case; and then Garter King of Arms, in the like Posture presented the George adorned also with Diamonds, hanging to a Blue Ribbon, to the Sovereign, who put it over the Prince's Shoulder, while Garter King of Arms read the Admonition. Then his most Serene Highness the Prince, with the Great Chamberlain of Hanover, and Garter King of Arms, making their Reverences, withdrew, and through a Side Door returned to the Room above-mentioned near adjoining, where the Prince being first disrobed of his upper Habits and Sword, was invested with the Crimson Velvet Surcoat of the Order by Garter King of Arms, who read the proper Admonition, and was then also girt by him with the Sword and Hangers of the Order; whereupon the Prince was pleased to take up the Velvet Cap with the Plumes of Feathers, and to carry it in his own Hands, and then an Entry was made into the long Gallery with the like Ceremonies as at first. The Sovereign being then standing before his Chair of State, the Escutcheon of his Majesty's Arms and Titles was held behind it, and his most Serene Highness standing on the Sovereign's Right Hand, near the Table where the Habits and Ensigns of the Order above-mentioned had been formerly laid, and having the Escutcheon of his Arms and Stiles held behind him, Garter King of Arms took up the Great Mantle of the Order, and invested the Prince therewith, reading the Admonition accustomed, and over it placed, on the Prince's Right Shoulder, the Hood, bringing the Tippet athwart his Breast in the usual Manner, and tied on the Great Collar with the George pendant thereto, reading the Admonition enjoined upon that Occasion, and then placed the Cap with the Plumes of Feathers on the Prince's Head, who made his low Reverences to the Sovereign. There was a numerous Appearance at this Ceremony of Persons of Quality of both Sexes, in very rich Habits.
