It is reported that Seckendorf is in some Danger, if not timely succoured, the Imperialists having, after their Success at Altheim, been defeated at Scharding, but this is doubtful. He is endeavouring to raise a Division in Austria, by encouraging the Bavarian Boors to conform to a Patent from the Emperor, enjoying them to make Incurfions into that Province with what Arms or Tools they can muster, and to burn and plunder where-ever they are able.

Hague, Nov. 16, N. S. All our Accounts agree, that the Austrian and French Armies were upon the Banks of the Danube, and very near each other. Some Advices say, that the Great Duke was making a Bridge over that River near Deckendorf, and that Marshal Maillebois was doing the same between Kelheim and Ratisbon. The French give out here, that their Intention is to besiege Passau.
