

case of Need, the heavy Artillery, which is all preserved. But as some Time will be requisite for repairing the Damage we have suffered by the Loss, our Stay in this Camp will be short, especially as we are informed that the Prussians marched Yesterday towards Hirschberg.

From the Saxon Head Quarters at Slatin, June 8, N. S.

The Day before Yesterday, at Nine o'Clock in the Morning, we had Advice, that the Prussian Army was in full March to our Camp by Landshut, and that General Nadasti was forced to retreat. As on Account of the considerable Loss of Artillery, Generals, and upper Officers, it was not adviseable to risk and expose ourselves to the dubious Event of another Engagement; and as we did not at first intend to keep the Camp by Landshut, the farther Retreat to Bohemia was resolved upon. The Army disposed accordingly, and the March begun in good Order. This was facilitated by the Precautions already taken of sending the Baggage before by Break of Day, and the Troops were the less interrupted in their March. General Nadasti, with the Hussars and five Pulcks of Uhlans, formed the Rear Guard of the Combined Army, and, not to divide it, it was thought proper for the Whole to march by Schimberg. Our Rear Guard skirmished for an Hour behind Landshut with the Prussian Avant Guard, which had some Pieces of Cannon; sometimes one Side, sometimes the other had the Advantage, as it usually happens in such Cases. The Day before Yesterday we came into the Camp by Johnsdorff, and Yesterday into this, and we were not disturbed in our March Yesterday. To give the Troops Time to refresh themselves after the two fatiguing Marches over the Mountains, we halt To-day, but intend to proceed To-morrow to the Neighbourhood of Jaromitz and Konigshoff. Prince Charles intends to have his Head Quarters in the former, and the Duke in the latter, so that the Right Wing will be at Jaromitz, and the Left at Konigshoff. As far as we can learn, the whole Prussian Army is march'd to Landshut, and we have also Reports that it was gone to Hirschberg. Wherefore to prevent the Prussian Army from penetrating into Bohemia by Trautenau, and cutting us from the Communication with Saxony, that Pass is occupied by an Austrian Regiment of Dragoons. Orders are also given for cutting down the Trees, and a sufficient Number of Men will be posted there. Mean Time a Detachment of Uhlans is commanded to Trautenau, to observe and give Informations of the Motions of the Prussians.

Dresden, June 11, N. S. The Rumour of a second Action between the Prussians and the Allied Armies upon the 6th, arose from nothing but a few Skirmishes between them in the Retreat made by the latter. Not one of the Saxon Generals is kill'd, without it be Major General Schlichting, who was left behind dangerously wounded. Lieutenant General Polentz is alive, and was only thought lost, from being trampled upon by his Horse, as was Lieutenant General Berkholtz and Prince Sonderhausen Major General. Major General Darfield, who behaved extremely well, and is thought one of the best Horse Officers in the Saxon Army, received a Cut in his Head, but will soon be able to do Duty. Nor is it affirmed, that any amongst the Austrian Generals, except Thungen, is kill'd. The whole Loss of the Saxons is now said to be less than was at first imagin'd, and that of the Prussians to be very considerable. The Recruiting here goes on very successfully, and it is thought that the Troops at present in Bohemia will be easily completed in three Weeks, by which Time they will likewise receive the Cannon that is wanting.

Mentz, June 10. M. de la Farre is advanced towards Aschaffenburg; and the Prince of Conti, after having assembled all the French Troops which were either in Alsace or Swabia, together with the Remains of M. de Segur's Corps, is returning by the Bergstrass in order to join M. de la Farre.

Berlin, June 12, N. S. It is assured that the Prussian Avant-Guard, under the Command of General du Moulin has taken Post at Konigsgratz in Bohemia. M. Cagnoni arrived here Yesterday Morning from Dresden. The Saxon Minister (Bulow) and Resident (Sipman,) at this Court, received Orders Yesterday to leave Berlin, in the same Manner that M. Cagnoni had left Dresden, and they are now preparing to set out. Hellerman's Battalion last from Stettin, entered into Garrison in this Town upon the 9th of this Month. The Reigning Prince of Dessau has received Orders to make the necessary Regulations for putting the Magdebourg Corps in March immediately.

Hague, June 12, N. S. The Allied Army remained on the 9th Instant in its Camp of Lefines. The Cittadel of Tournay holds out; and, according to some Advices, costs the Enemy a good Number of Men.

Hague, June 15, N. S. It is reported here, that the Detachment of the Prince of Conti's Corps, which pass'd the Rhine at Biberich on the 23d and 24th past, and was advancing to the Saar, has been countermanded, and sent back to join that Prince's main Army in the County of Darmstat. We hear from Antwerp, that the Battering Train was begun to be embarked upon the Scheld on Tuesday last, and would be all ready to be transported wherever Occasion might require in ten or twelve Days.

Dover, June 8. We have received Advice, that the Transports with the Troops from Gravesend, arrived safe at Ostend Yesterday Morning.

Dover, June 10. Yesterday Evening his Majesty's Ships the Faulkland and Sapphire, with eleven Sail of Transports under their Convoy, passed this Road from Cork, which Place they left on Tuesday last; and as the Wind has continued very fair, it is thought they are by this Time arrived at Ostend.
