And to four private Bills.

After which his Excellency was pleased to make the following Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE Business of the Session being now concluded, I believe you cannot be unwilling to return to your respective Countries; as you must be sensible that the many good Laws which you have passed will receive an additional Weight by your Authority in executing, and by your Example in observing them.

The almost unprecedented Temper and Unanimity with which you have carried on the publick Business, your unshaken Fidelity to the King, your inviolable Attachment to the prefent happy Constitution, and your just Indignation at the Attempts lately made to subvert it, will advantageously distinguish this Session in the Journals of Parliament; and the concurrent Zeal, and active Loyalty of all his Majesty's Protestant Subjects, of all Denominations throughout this Kingdom, prove at once how fensible and how deserving they are of his Care and Protection. Even those deluded People, who scarcely acknowledge his Government, seem by their Conduct tacitly to have confessed the Advantages they enjoy under it. At my Return to his Majesty's Presence, I shall not fail most faithfully to report these Truths, since the most faithful will be, at the same Time, the most favourable Representation.

The Rebellion which rather disturbed than endanger'd the King's Government, has been defeated, though not yet totally suppress'd; but as those flagitious Parricides, who were abandon'd enough to avow, and desperate enough to engage in, the Cause of Popery and Tyranny, have already been repulsed and pursued by the Valour and Activity of his Royal Highness the Duke, there is the strongest Reason to believe that he will foon compleat the Work which he has so gloriously begun, and restore the Tranquillity of the Kingdom. This Attempt therefore, to shake his Majesty's Throne, will serve to establish it the more firmly; since all Europe must now know the unanimous Zeal and Asfection of his Subjects for the Defence and Support of his Person and Government; and those Hopes are at last extinguished with which the Pretender has so long flatter'd, and (as it now. appears) deceived himself: Even the Manner in which he has been affisted by those Powers, who encouraged him to the Attempt, must' convince him, that he has now been, what he ever will be, only the occasional Tool of their Politicks, not the real Object of their Care. 5

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,
I have the King's Commands to thank you,
in his Name, for the Unanimity and Dispatch with which you have granted the necessary Supplies for the Support of the Establishment; you may depend upon their being applied with the utmost Exactness and Frugality.
