

When we consider by whom, and at what Season this unnatural Rebellion was fomented; that it was raised and maintained by the common Enemies of the Liberties of Europe, at the Instant they were using their utmost Efforts to subvert the Freedom of Mankind; that it was manifestly contrived to distress your Majesty's Affairs at Home, by introducing Confusion into your Kingdoms, by which they hoped to disable your faithful Subjects from giving your Majesty the Aid necessary for carrying on successfully the just War in which your Majesty is engaged; we cannot too loudly rejoice for the Success of your Majesty's Arms over wicked Rebels, infatuated Dupes to the Ambition of Princes ever Enemies to the well being of British Subjects.

But when we figure to ourselves the lamentable Circumstances, under which your Majesty's Protestant Subjects would inevitably have groaned had the Rebellion been successful; that those of your faithful Subjects, who had the Misfortune to survive it, would have been the Sport and Scorn of merciless Priests and Papists; would have been at once deprived of the Exercise of the purest Religion, and the Enjoyment of their Liberty and Property; and must have parted with your Majesty's gentle and legal Government, for that of a popish Outlaw, directed by the arbitrary and cruel Maxims of France, Spain and Rome; we can never enough praise God for our great Deliverance, nor be sufficiently thankful to your Majesty for your paternal Care of us and the rest of your Majesty's Subjects, which you manifested, by exposing one of your Royal Issue, so justly dear to your Majesty, to the imminent Dangers of a barbarous War, merely to secure to your People the Enjoyment of those Blessings, which they cannot lose, whilst your Majesty holds the Scepter of these Kingdoms.

May your Majesty's Reign over these Kingdoms be long and happy; and may you be succeeded to the End of Time by your own Royal and Illustrious Descendants; may your Majesty be ever victorious over your Enemies, and reign in the Hearts of a grateful and flourishing People; may your Power be ever formidable to those, who would load the World with Chains; may it confound them who would interrupt the Happiness of those who live under your Government, and may your Subjects continue to be the Envy of the whole World, being protected by your Bravery, and directed by your Wisdom.

Given under the Common Seal of the said City, this 18th Day of June, 1746.

The following Address of the Mayor, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the Borough of Kellington, in the County of Cornwall, has been presented to his Majesty by Thomas Copleston, Esq; one of their Representatives in Parliament, being introduced by the Right Honourable the Earl Paulet, one of the Lords of his Majesty's Bed-chamber in Waiting: Which Address his Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The humble Address of the Mayor, Freeholders and Inhabitants of the Borough of Kellington, in the County of Cornwall.

PERmit us again, most gracious Sovereign, to approach your Royal Presence, with a Renewal of the most cordial and sincere Professions of our Duty, Loyalty and Affection to your Majesty's Person and Government, and most humbly to offer our Congratulations (with the rest of your faithful Subjects) on the late great and happy Event of the Demolition of the Rebels, by the signal Victory obtained over them in Scotland, from the known Valour of your Majesty's British Troops, and which must always be so, in the most eminent Degree, when inspir'd and led on to Glory by your Majesty's Son the Duke of Cumberland; a Prince, whose distinguish'd Courage, Humanity, Conduct, and good Sense, hath rendered him the Admiration of the Age, and Praises from our very Enemies. But such exalted Merit seems to be inherent in your august House, when we consider (after so many Years Experience of your Majesty's, as well as your Royal Father's Wisdom and Valour) from whence he is descended; and the many brave and valiant Men from the same great Stock, in former Ages, may be deemed to be still a farther Confirmation thereof.

The manifest Consequence of this Success hath been the Preservation of our Religion, Laws and Liberties, in the Room of French Government, and arbitrary Power, accompanied with the worst of all Scourges, papal Tyranny.

There is a Sympathy in great Souls, even amongst generous Adversaries; and how much more so, when in the same Family, or amongst those pursuing the same glorious Cause, the Liberties and Happiness of Mankind. It is from hence (if possible) this brave young Hero grows more and more endear'd to his Royal Father; it is from the same Impulse, that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with every Branch of the Royal Family, so truly rejoice and love him; and it is from a good and honest Principle, that every true Briton must always pray for your Majesty's long and happy Reign over us; and that there may be never wanting a Prince of your most illustrious House to sway the
