Hague, June 14, N. S. The Success which the Peasants had in the Province of Friesland, in obtaining of the States the Abolition of several Taxes, has encouraged the Inhabitants of some of the other Provinces to expect the same of their Superiors, and there have been some Disorders at Rotterdam and other Towns of Holland. In order to prevent the bad Consequences of these Commotions, the Prince of Orange and the Deputies of the Council have issued a Proclamation, in which they set forth the many Inconveniences that would infallibly attend the Abolition of the Taxes demanded, and represent the Impossibility the States are in, of supporting the Expences that are incumbent on them, without those Taxes, or others which would fall heavier on the Inhabitants of the Province. For which Reason, they exhort every one not to oppose or resist the Pachtors or their Substitutes in the Collection of the Revenues which they farm, but to remain quiet till the Government can conveniently examine into the Grievances of which they complain; declaring, at the same Time, that the Refractory shall be severely punished as Disturbers of the publick Peace.

Rotterdam, June 18. The Mob committed some Disorders Yesterday at Leyden, and last Night pull'd down some Houses, but no great Mischief was done. The People of Amsterdam were threatned with a Tumult last Night, but the Mob give out that next Thursday is the Day which they have fix'd on to assemble;

however, as the Magistrates have Notice thereof, it is hoped that any ill Consequences will be prevented.

Hague, June 18, N. S. The Prince of Orange is considerably recovered, but so weakened by his Fever, that it will be some Time before his Highness can be in a Condition to take his Journey to Leewarden.
