The Archbishop himself performed that Holy Office, at which were likewise present all the Great Officers of State, the Nobility, Clergy, Parliament, and our Chief Magistrates. When the Service was ended, their Majesties went to their Apartment in the Palace, from whence the King caused several handfuls of Silver to be thrown amongst the Populace. And at Night all the Houses in the publick Streets were illuminated, Fountains ran with Wine in all the publick Places, and all possible Demonstrations of Zeal and Affection were shewn by the People on that joyful Occasion.
