Genoa, Nov. 19. The Murder of M. Gafforio, by his Brother, seems to have entail'd greater Embroils amongst the Malecontents than was at first foreseen. The Republick refusing to give him Refuge in Calvi, upon his being sent out of that Town he has immediately seized, and conducted to Prison, whither M. Matra went with a Priest; and after allowing him only Time to confess, immediately put him to Death. An Estafette is arrived from St. Remo to the Government, with Notice, that a Body of near 500 Men are in Arms, with a Design to revenge themselves on the Inhabitants of La Colle, for withdrawing themselves from their Community, which occasioned the late Rebellion at St. Remo, and the Loss of the Privileges and Immunities hitherto enjoyed by the St. Remasios.

Madrid, Nov. 19. Their Catholick Majesties intend to return hither To-morrow Evening from the Escorial, where they have resided above a Month. The Beginning of last Week died, after a long Illness, the Marquis de Villa Franca, Grand Master of the King's Household: He is succeeded in Title and Estate by his eldest Son the Duke of Fernandina. His Majesty has been pleased to confer the Employment of Grand Master of his Household, on the Duke of Huefear, Captain of the Spanish Company of Life Guards; as also to give that Company of Guards to the Duke of Bannos, Commander of the Royal Regiment of Carbineers; and to appoint the Marquis of Coria, Son to the Duke of Huefear, to succeed the Duke of Bannos in the Command of the Royal Carbineers. The Marquis de St. Marsan, who has resided at this Court for three Years, in Quality of Ambassador from the King of Sardinia, will set out in a few Days on his Return to Turin, his Successor being already arrived.

Turin, Nov. 21. General Baratieri, who commanded the Spanish Artillery during the late War, is come hither from the Infant Duke, to thank his Sardinian Majesty for the Attentions that were shewn to the Infanta Dutchess in her Passage through his Sardinian Majesty's Dominions.

Vienna, Nov. 21. Orders are sent to the Officers appointed to regulate the new Establishment of the Militia in the Hereditary Countries, not to enroll any who are not five Feet three Inches high. The States of Lower Austria continue their Deliberations on the Demands made by her Imperial Majesty for the Year ensuing, with such Unanimity, that there is no Doubt of their being complied with. The Chamber of Finances have contracted for between 14 and 15000 Horses to remount the Imperial Cavalry, which are to be delivered before the Month of May next.

Versailles, Nov. 29. On Monday last the King arrived here with the Royal Family. Madame Victoire is quite recovered of her late Indisposition,

[Price Two-Pence.]
