

Leghorn, Aug. 29. By our last Advices from Corsica, we learn, that M. Pasquali de Paole, seeing a Faction raised against him, by the Perfidiousness of some of his People, courageously opposed them; and was therein assisted by the Commons of the Nation, who elected him their Chief, and Director; and that, having assembled a Body of Seven Thousand Men, he defeated Matra, Chief of that Faction, who, in a little Time after, was quite abandoned by his Followers, and obliged to fly with the Remnant, about One Hundred Men, into a small Fort situated on the Shore of Alena, from whence, in a small Skiff, he sent his Wife and Family to Bastia, leaving his House and Effects at the Discretion of the Conquerors; which, however, they would not demolish, out of Regard to his Brother, a Lieutenant Colonel in the Service of the King of Sardinia. It is added, that Matra, in this Situation, implored Succours from the Genoese Commissaries, and that, in Consequence thereof, a Quantity of Flour, Powder, and Shot, had been sent him from Bastia. That M. de Paole had caused a General Pardon to be proclaimed in all the Parishes, to all such as had taken up Arms against him, excepting, nevertheless, fourteen Persons, amongst whom are Matra, Santucci and Son, Cotoni and Paganelli, who all, as Traytors and Rebels against their Country, were proscribed, and their Crimes declared Capital. Their Goods and Effects have been burnt or plunder'd, as also have been those of their Dependents, who refused the Benefit of the Proclamation. Those who accepted it, were exempted from any other Punishment, besides being sent Prisoners to the Castle of Corte. It is thought that M. de Paole will prosecute his March; and there is a Report, that he intends to attack Matra, with the Remains of his Faction, in the Fort of Alena.

Hamburg, Sept. 5. Baron Backof, the Danish Envoy at the Imperial Court, having obtained Leave of Absence for some Time from his Post, is arrived here from Vienna, on his Way to Denmark.

Turin, Sept. 6. Thursday the 4th Instant, the Count of Noailles, Ambassador Extraordinary from his most Christian Majesty to this Court, arrived here.

Copenhagen, Sept. 9. On the 7th Instant, about Eleven of the Clock at Night, died here, after a few Days Illness, his Excellency Werner Count Schulenburg, who was Privy Counsellor, Knight of the Order of the Elephant, Field Marshal and Secretary at War in the Service of the King of Denmark. Being far advanced in Years, he was quickly carried off by a Mortification, which begun, without any remarkable Accident, in one of his Feet.

Brussels, Sept. 16. We are informed, that in all Probability the French Troops will remain in their Cantonments till they begin to separate on the 20th Instant, on Account of the Badness of the Ground in their Camp at Aimezie, which is now become a mere Morass: We likewise hear that six Battallions of those Troops are to be removed to the inward Parts of the Kingdom, from whence upwards of 30 Battallions are ordered to march into French Flanders, and upon the Maese, so as to make up the Number of 90 or 92 Battallions, by which the Troops in these Parts will be increased to above double their present Number, including the Augmentation of four Companies per Battallion and ten Men per Company. The Captains are already appointed, and actually employed in raising their Companies, which are all to be compleat against the Time of the Reviews in March. The Regiments of Horse are to be augmented with ten Men per Troop, as well as the Dragoons, which last are besides, to have four additional Troops in each Regiment. The whole Augmentation in the National Troops, it is computed, will amount to Sixty-five Thousand Men. Governor Luttelton, who was taken on board his Britannick Majesty's Ship the Blandford, by M. du Guay's Squadron, arrived here Yesterday on his Return to England. Count Colloredo and Marquis Paolucci arrived here together last Friday from Hanover.
