

To his Excellency William Marquess of Hartington, Lord Lieutenant General, and General Governor of Ireland,

The humble Address of the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, in Parliament assembled.

May it please your Excellency,

WE His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Ireland, in Parliament assembled, return you our most humble Thanks for your excellent Speech from the Throne; and assure your Excellency we have the most grateful Sense of your Care and Concern for our Welfare and Quiet, manifested by your coming amongst us so immediately after His Majesty's Appointment of you to the Government of this Kingdom.

The uncommon Trouble you have had, and the great Vigilance and Wisdom you have shewn, in putting our Affairs in a proper and secure Posture against our Enemies foreign and domestick, call upon us, in the strongest Manner, cheerfully to grant such Supplies as may be necessary for the Support of the Establishment.

The Reliance your Excellency assures us His Majesty has on our Loyalty and zealous Attachment to His Royal Person, Family, and Government, gives us at this Time, and will always give us, the greatest Comfort; and cannot fail of producing, on our Parts, the just Returns of most affectionate Duty, Gratitude, and Confidence: And we have not the least Doubt, but your Excellency will represent us to His Majesty as deserving the Continuance of that paternal Goodness which we have so long and so sensibly experienced.

We have an intire Confidence in the Assurance your Excellency gives us of your Assistance in procuring all necessary Laws for the Improvement of our Commerce and Inland Navigation, and particularly of our Linen Manufacture, upon which the Prosperity of this Nation so much depends; and we shall not fail to give all proper Encouragement towards the Support of the Protestant Charter-Schools; and shall concur with your Excellency in every Measure conducive to the Happiness and Honour of this Kingdom.

As the sincerest Zeal for the Support of His Majesty's Government, for the Succession of the Crown in His Royal Family, and for those invaluable Religious and Civil Rights settled and entailed on us by the glorious Revolution, has, and shall be, the ruling Principle of our Conduct; so the committing the Case of this Kingdom to your Excellency, whose Ancestors had so remarkable a Share in bringing about and supporting that Revolution, and establishing that Succession, and who do yourself so nobly inherit the same virtuous Principles, must be allowed by all Men as the highest Instance of His Majesty's Regard to this Kingdom, and as the happiest and surest Means of restoring that Temper and Unanimity which your Excellency has so worthily recommended to us.

The Lord Lieutenant's Answer.

Nothing could give greater Satisfaction than the Regard express'd for me in your kind and obliging Address. I shall make the best Return in my Power, by sincerely endeavouring, upon all Occasions, to promote the true Interest and Welfare of this Kingdom.

Kensington, October 18.
